U. S. ECHOES PEACE HOPES ON HOLIDAY

Divided in Thanksgiving Day Date, Nation Unanimous on Roosevelt Sentiments.

OBSERVED IN 28 STATES

Mansfield Marks Thanksgiving Quietly; Churches Join for Union Services.

A nation divided over the date of its traditional Thanksgiving holiday was unanimous today in echoing President Roosevelt's proclamation:

"Let us give thanks to the ruler of the universe . . . for the hope that lives within us of the coming of the day when peace and the productive activities of peace shall reign on every continent."

In Mansfield churches and in quiet household celebrations this thought was uppermost, and to it was added sincere thanks for the spiritual as well as material blessings.

Mansfield streets were virtually deserted today as the city quietly commemorated the anniversary of the day when the Pilgrim fathers gave thanks.

Ohio was one of 28 states observing Thanksgiving today, following the president's proclamation of moving up the holiday a week ahead of the traditional date. Twenty-five other states will celebrate next Thursday—five of these are observing both dates.

Most of Mansfield's churches joined in four union services over the city this morning where ministers talked of many reasons for thanksgiving in American cities and homes.

At First Congregational church Rev. James L. Boyer, pastor of United Brethren church, addressed members of six congregations, his own, First Methodist, First United Brethren, First Presbyterian, First Christian and First Congregational.

His subject was taken from Paul's first letter to the Corinthians, in which the great apostle gave thanks for the experience of salvation, the endowment of spiritual graces, and for the hope of a bright future.

Cites Spiritual Blessings.

"We people of today can join with Paul in giving thanks for these things for we still have them. It is all well and good to give thanks for our material blessings, but let us not forget to be grateful for our spiritual blessings."

Congregations from Park Avenue Baptist, St. Matthew's Lutheran and Central Methodist churches met at the Baptist church and heard Rev. Charles F. Sheriff of St. Matthew's preach on "Our Priceless Heritage."

He said that when the Pil-

FREE SHERIFF IN PATERNITY CASE

Lorain Jurors Deliberate 41 Minutes to Clear Him of Unwed Mother's Charge.

(By United Press)

ELYRIA—Sheriff Carl R. Finegan of Lorain county was cleared today of a paternity charge brought by Miss Mary Bender, a 23-year-old unmarried mother.

A jury of five women and seven men took only 41 minutes and one ballot to find that the handsome young sheriff was not the father of Miss Bender's 28-months-old daughter.

The verdict climaxed three days' testimony during which Miss Bender charged that the 34-year-old bachelor sheriff had met her in love trysts 15 or 20 times. Testifying in his own defense yesterday, Finegan said he had seen her on only four occasions before she accused him of the paternity of her daughter, Patricia Ann.

Finegan revealed during his testimony yesterday that he had been engaged to marry Miss Marcella Kelsh of Amherst for 18 months. The youthful sheriff said previously in the trial that the charge against him was a "political frameup."

Miss Bender gave birth to her child July 4, 1937, in a Cleveland hospital.

TRAIN WRECKED

Engineer Killed, 4 Hurt When Chicago Flyer Hits Car.

NORTH CHICAGO, Ill.—(U.P.)—The engineer of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad's north bound "Winnebago" limited was killed and two crew members and two passengers were injured late yesterday when the train struck a railway motor car.

One hundred and thirty passengers on the eight-car train escaped injury although four cars were derailed.

The engineer, Harry M. Anderson, Chicago, was crushed to death when the locomotive overturned and rolled down an embankment.

Four section hands who were riding on the motor car said they did not see the approaching train. They jumped to safety before the collision.

DEATH SAYS NO

Accident Kills Aged Couple Who Hoped For Visit With Kin.

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — For weeks, Anthony Palazzo, 81, and his wife, Josephine, 79, had looked forward to a Thanksgiving visit with their daughter and son-in-law.

The son-in-law, Eugene Conte, came from his home in Waterford, N. J., yesterday to get them. He found the old couple dead. A pot of coffee had boiled over, quenching the gas flame on the kitchen stove.

SPURS SEARCH

Bank Loot Identified, Columbus Hunts for Robbers.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Search for two men who held up a South Charleston, W. Va., bank 10 days ago centered in Ohio today following disclosure that part of the $18,800 stolen had been traced to Columbus.

According to police, one of the men walked into a Columbus bank and exchanged part of the loot, $1,000 in new $10 bills for currency of higher denominations.

BUS DRIVER KILLED

TOLEDO, O. — (AP) — Herbert Gates, 23, was killed yesterday when the empty suburban passenger bus he was driving collided with an automobile.

Tygers Favorites In Clash With Cuyahoga Falls Today

A varied football program was to follow the turkey and plum pudding courses today.

Involved in the heavy firing in this fading season were college as well as high school games, and the No. 1 game on the Thanksgiving menu as far as Mansfield was concerned was the post-season clash at Stadium field at 2:30 p. m.

This contest featured the Mansfield Tygers and Cuyahoga Falls, A crowd of 7,000 was expected to see the game, a benefit for the high school band's uniform fund.

Despite a soggy field which was expected to slow up the speed of the Tyger backfield, Mansfield ruled a heavy favorite.

About 40 collegiate tilts were to be played today and six of these games featured "name" teams. The headline games were Denver-Idaho, Maryland-Syracuse, Richmond-William and Mary, Utah-Utah State, Virginia Poly-Virginia Military and Washington-Oregon.

All of the seven perfect-record teams are idle, but on Saturday most of them go out again and tr yto maintain the sizzling pace they've set all season.

Four topnotch traditional games were offered Ohio collegiate fans today.

Cincinnati was the scene of two games, Cincinnati-Miami and Xavier-Toledo. Case and Western-Reserve clashed in Cleveland, and Baldwin-Wallace and Ohio Wesleyan tangled at Delaware.

Long Island coached by Clair Bee, former Mansfield high mentor, faced Catholic university.

GANG SLAYING

Hollywood Clothes Presser Killed in Movie Area.

HOLLYWOOD—(U.P.)—A pair of methodical killers, who stood at close range and fired three bullets, shot and killed George Schachter, 48, formerly of New York, today as he sat in his parked car on a downtown street.

Police said the killing had the earmarks of a gangland "rub-out," but they had no immediate theory as to the killers or the motive.

Schachter was a clothes presser by trade, according to his wife, and he came here six months ago from New York. He was shot in the head, cheek and throat.

+ + We Thank Thee, Lord + +

By Clarence Hawkes

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following Thanksgiving poem was written by Clarence Hawkes, the blind poet of Hadley, Mass., who has been sightless for 56 of his 69 years.)

By CLARENCE HAWKES

Dear Lord, we thank Thee that this day,
Amid a world of strife,
Where brave men die, while women pray,
We live a normal life.
With hope and peace throughout the land,
Where every man may live
A life that's full and free and grand
And all men tolerance give.
There is no black-out here, Thank God;
Ours is a free untrammelled sod.

God make us grateful for all good,
Instruct us in Thy truth,
In noisy town, or solitude,
In age or callow youth.
God keep our nation in the path
That leads to love and peace.
Let us not taste the Grapes of Wrath,
The fate of Rome and Greece.
Let war and carnage pass us by,
With peace on earth and in the sky.

Let us remember in this hour,
Our brothers o'er the sea,
Who bend beneath the War Lord's power,
In utter misery.
God bless them all and speed the day,
When wars will be forgot,
For brotherhood we hourly pray,
With love in every heart,
For hope and peace across the sea,
One God, one faith and charity.

ACTS TO BRING HAM AND EGGS PLAN TO OHIO

Cleveland Man Seeks Attorney General's OK to Put Scheme Before Assembly.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert today was asked to approve the form of a new initiative law which would give to Ohio the "Ham and Eggs" pension plan rejected by California voters recently.

Instead of the $50 a month old age pension as provided in the overwhelmingly defeated Bigelow pension plan, the new proposal provides "Thirty dollars every Thursday" for everyone 55 years of age or older who is not an employer or employed.

The proposal was submitted by E. L. Lansing, Cleveland. Sponsors plan to initiate the law through the legislature. Under this method, instead of submitting it directly to the voters, they must secure approximately 150,000 signatures to petitions calling upon the state legislature to enact the proposal into law.

If the legislature fails to do so within four months, filing of an additional 150,000 names would force the secretary of state to place the question on the ballot for a decision by the voters.

Calls for Life Payments.

The proposal provides for "retirement life payments" supervised by an administrator who is elected by the people every two years. "Ohio state money orders" will be paid to eligible pensioners, and stamps must be affixed to these orders every week until they are cancelled. $1.04 in stamps will cancel a $1.00 money order.

All public employes must accept at least half their salaries in the "ham and egg" warrants. Old age pensioners are promised $30 every Thursday in addition to their present pensions.

As a beginning, the state is required to turn $700,000 over to the life retirement administrator to start the plan in motion.

GET RELIEF AID

Cleveland's Needy to Receive $300,000 From State.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Cleveland's relief worries eased somewhat today with word that the city would receive approximately $300,000 from surplus utility excise taxes.

Frank G. Jones, city relief commissioner, said he believed the funds would be sufficient to meet half the cost of caring for the city's 60,000 relief families to the first of the year.

Possibility that the state would match the funds advanced the chance of 75 per cent operations. Estimates of the matching total ran as high as $122,000. Jones said the normal city expenditure for the period would be $750,000.

Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert's ruling on the excise taxes followed Mayor Harold H. Burton's first attack on Gov. John W. Bricker as the man who was responsible for Cleveland's current relief situation.

Late Bulletins

Dutch To Curb Exports To Britain

AMSTERDAM—(UP)—The Netherlands, Belgium and other neutral nations today considered ways and means of meeting the situation created by the impending Allied blockade of German exports. It was believed here that Netherlands exports to Great Britain would be reduced proportionately with a decrease in exports to Germany due to the blockade in order to maintain the strictest neutrality.

HANOVER, N. H.—(INS)—An attempt by the American Student Union to bring Earl R. Browder, Communist leader, to the Dartmouth campus as a speaker ended in failure today with refusal of the student government body to approve the application.

Sub's Gunfire Sinks French Boat

PASAJES, Spain—(AP)—Sixteen crewmen of the French fishing boat Balyes II reported today their boat was sunk off the coast of France by gunfire of a German submarine. They said the commander ordered them off the boat, sank it with five shots, and then notified a passing Spanish fishing vessel which picked up the survivors.

CINCINNATI—(AP)—A fusillade of police pistol fire killed a Detroit man near the courthouse, today, a short time after he broke away from a guard returning him from Milan, Mich., to Chattanooga, Tenn., on housebreaking charges. He was identified as Alonzo Hayes, 30.

BORAH OPPOSES U. S.-JAP STAND

Hits Decision to Delay on New Treaty, Says We'll Need All the Trade We Can Get.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—One of the senate's foremost experts on foreign affairs took issue today with an apparent state department decision to defer negotiations for a new United States-Japanese trade treaty until Japanese treatment of Americans and U. S. business in China is improved.

Sen. William E. Borah, (R.-Ida.) former chairman of the senate foreign relations committee and a leader in the unsuccessful fight to retain the arms embargo said he believed that negotiations should be started to bring about a "fair and reasonable" trade treaty between the U. S. and Japan, replacing the present agreement which expires Jan. 26 as a result of this government's renunciation.

"I notice our trade with Japan is increaisng very decidedly and we are not going to have so much trade on our hands that we can safely throw any of it aside without a very sound reason for doing so," Borah said.

His statement came less than 24 hours after an unusually brusque state department denial that new treaty negotiations now are in progress, and an assertion that the new treaty depends upon future developments.

The Idahoan placed himself in opposition to Chairman Key Pittman, (D.-Nev.) of the senate foreign relations committee who has announced he will press for action next session on a resolution authorizing the U. S. to embargo exports to Japan. Pittman said he anticipated approval, with little opposition.

WESTINGHOUSE SEES BIG YEAR

Marked Increase Forecast in Sales as Firm Prepares to Introduce 1940 Models.

One of the best business years in Westinghouse history was forecast yesterday for 1940 by Frank P. Kohnstamm, sales manager of the firm's merchandising division, who announced plans for a series of sales and preview meetings to introduce the firm's new line of products.

"We are expecting a substantial sales increase next year and as a result we have stepped up our entire program," Kohnstamm said. "An increased advertising appropriation to build greater consumer acceptance and an increased effort on sales training are two of the highlights of next year's plan, all of which have been carefully laid with our retailers' problems foremost in mind.

"The 1940 line of Westinghouse products will be shown, after the City of Nanking Reports Big Losses in Jap Attack.

CHUNGKING—(U.P.)—Chinese military dispatches today reported appalling destruction and heavy loss of life at Nanning, Kwangsi province capital, now under attack by Japanese columns which landed on the Gulf of Tongking two weeks ago.

Ten Japanese air raids a day have been staged against Nanning for the last three days, the Chinese reported.

Air raid alarms in Nanning have been almost continuous, the Chinese said. Large portions of the city are in flames. Casualties are known to be great but the almost constant presence of Japanese bombers has made it impossible to count the bodies.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—A magneto spark, which ignited vapor in an empty gasoline tank on a hay baler, was blamed today for a $50,000 fire which destroyed two barns on the stock farm of Common Pleas Judge Edward C. Turner late yesterday. Approximately 100 tons of hay and most of the farm equipment were destroyed, according to Judge Turner.

LONDON—German mines, strewn off the British coast, today increased the heavy toll of Allied and neutral shipping on the high seas.

The Greek freighter Elenar, 4,576 tons, Argentina to Antwerp bound with a cargo of wheat, went down off the southern coast of England after striking a mine. Twenty-four persons aboard, including a woman, were saved by a coastal lifeboat.

It was disclosed belatedly that the British steamer Geraldine, formerly the Candleston Castle, 2,495 tons, was sunk by a mine off the Irish coast Tuesday night. The crew of 26 was picked up by a British warship.

A French vessel, reported earlier to have gone down off the English coast, was identified today as a French trawler. It was feared that nine of its crew of 10 were lost.

Latest merchant fleet sinkings followed the loss of Britain's seventh warship in the war, the 1,335-ton destroyer Gipsy which, the admiralty announced, went down in shallow water after striking a mine off the east coast of England. It was feared that 50 men

Government Heads In Rumania Resign, Nazi Hopes Fade

BUCHAREST—(AP)—The Rumanian government headed by Premier Constantine Argetoianu resigned today. The government was formed Sept. 21.

The resignation followed closely upon Rumania's refusal to grant an increase of nearly 50 per cent in the exchange rate of the German mark—a blow at German hopes for greater trade with this country.

What, if any, connection there was between the two developments was not at once apparent.

A German economic mission, having failed to get the rate raised from 41.5 Rumanian lei to 60 lei for each mark, left for Berlin by air last night.

(In terms of American money, such a change would have raised the mark's purchasing power in Rumania from 30.3 cents to 43.8 cents.

Rumania also declined to furnish tank cars which Germany would need in buying Rumanian petroleum, but did agree to lift an embargo on the export of oil-bearing seeds to Germany.

WINTER WHEAT CROP RALLIES

In Good Shape Now, It Should Withstand Winter, Asserts County Agent Ganyard.

After a slow start due to the early fall drought, Richland county's new wheat has perked up and will enter the winter in good condition, County Agent George B. Ganyard said yesterday.

Abnormally dry weather after the grain was planted early in September retarded the growth and farmers feared that the wheat plants would be too frail to withstand the rigors of winter.

The county agent said the comparatively warm and wet weather during late October and early November stimulated the growth of the wheat and put it in condition to weather the cold and freezing and thawing.

Winter wheat, planted in the early fall, is dormant during the winter months and revives in the spring, reaching maturity in June.

The county agent said this year's county wheat acreage varied little from the 1938 seeding when about 32,000 acres were planted.

In recent years the acreage in the county has been reduced from the previous figure since from 1,300 to 1,600 farmers have been participating annually in the federal crop control program. Compliance with the program calls for limited wheat production so that the grain surplus can be controlled and the price stabilized.

To prove that the drunkometer test for drinking drivers recognized by Indiana law, is truthful in its verdict, Attorney Richard S. Kaplan, president of the Gary Ind., safety council, imbibes freely until he feels "woozy" and then takes the drunkometer test. The picture tells the story. Kaplan drank four "shots." The test proved he was unable to drive after drinking the four "shots."

2 Bands to Play Continuously For Park Benefit Ball

Four hours of continuous dancing are in store for Mansfield "steppers" who attend the benefit dance which will be held from 9 to 1 a. m., Saturday, at the Coliseum under auspices of the Mansfield Public Parks association.

Twenty-four musicians will play with less than ten seconds between their numbers. There are 12 members in both Bob Richard's and Tommy Van's orchestras. Richard's newly organized band will play from one end of the Coliseum and Van's from the other.

The dance will be the third in which two bands have joined as they played for two park benefits earlier in the year. They will play the final number together under one leader.

Tickets for the dance are being sold by members of the various park associations with Edward Wyllie as general chairman.

More than 700 cities in the United States now operate with civil service provisions for their personnel.

Quiet Ceremony Read Here Today For Miss Wagner

A VERY QUIET WEDDING ceremony was performed this morning at 9:30 o'clock by Rt. Rev. Msgr. R. C. Goebel at the St. Peter's Catholic church when Miss Ruth Wagner, 144 West First street, and Richard Hecht, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hecht, 31 Penn avenue, exchanged the nupital vows. The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Wagner, Cardington, was attired in a grotto blue dress with black accessories, and elbow length white kid gloves. She carried a white leather prayer book, and wore a gardenia and lily-of-the valley corsage.

Her only attendant was Miss Marie Hecht, sister of the bridegroom, who wore a teal blue dress and hat with gold accessories. Her corsage was of Talisman roses and yellow pompons. Dr. Camille Botte, Columbus, was best man, and Fred J. and Raymond E. Hecht, two brothers of the bridgegroom, were ushers.

Raymond Baum played the nuptial mass. The altar of the church was banked with palms, and lavender pompons. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Hecht will be at home at the West First street address.

The bride attended the Cardington high school, and has been employed as secretary to the district manager of the Montgomery-Ward company, while Mr. Hecht, who attended the St. Peter's schools, is employed by the state of Ohio division of highways.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades".

Our trip to my father's hideaway apartment in Greenwich Village, where we were taking the two conspirators against Dicky, was a quiet one. We sensed that Edith Fairfax was too agitated for speech, and we respected her feeling. She spoke only once, to ask where we were going, and when Lillian had told her, she relapsed into silence again. And Lillian put only one perfunctory question to her husband.

"You told them to blindfold them as soon as they reach a deserted side street, I suppose?"

"Of course," he replied, and Lillian added an explanatory codicil, evidently for my benefit and Edith's.

"They won't take the blinders off until they reach one of those cellar rooms," she said. "We're not taking any chances on their guessing where they are."

Fortunately, the street was deserted when we reached the apartment building. But Gus, evidently instructed beforehand, was on the lookout for us, and when he opened the door, the men whisked their blindfolded prisoners inside the door, sure that no eyes had witnessed their coming or their condition. But Dicky did not follow them in. Instead, he turned and came to the door of our car, putting out his hand to help me to alight.

"Hurry!" Lillian adjured, and as we all hastened up the steps she spoke to the driver imperatively.

"Get both cars to another street about five blocks away immediately. Get near a telephone, call us and give us the number. Then we can get you when we want you."

She explained as we went up the steps.

"We got away without those birds who were waiting at both ends of the block to snatch the Dicky-bird, getting wise to what was going on. But they saw these cars, and they're probably on the prowl already. I don't want them to lamp this apartment, not that there's any chance of their getting their friends back again, but because it isn't on the free list for strangers to know that there's anything more to this place than a lot of nice, innocuous walk-up apartments."

When we filed into the apartment hall, Gus was waiting for us.

"They took them into the back apartment," he said, "and they're waiting for you there."

He spoke to us all, but it was Lillian who answered.

"That's the one with the down steps, isn't it?" she asked, and Gus nodded.

Go to Secret Room.

"We'll go right in," she said. Then we all followed her through the door of the rear apartment.

The two conspirators against Dicky, still blindfolded, had been put into chairs by their guards, who were now standing in front of them. Both prisoners were pallid, and their fingers twitched. But when the woman heard Lillian's voice asking Dicky if he had seen any suspicious-looking cars on the route, she made a last stand at bravado.

"You don't think our friends are going to take this lying down, do you?" she asked.

"We hope they're not," Lillian retorted coolly, "for then they'll swim right into our net. And we sure can use anybody that's even remotely connected with trying to get hold of the Chief. So let's hope your little pals show up soon."

The woman was quiet for an instant. Then she blustered through another question.

"How long are you going to keep us blindfolded?" she asked. "And what are you going to do with us, anyway?"

"One question at a time," Lillian said. "You're going to be blindfolded until you reach the room where we're going to question you and find out who put you up to all this devilment."

I do not think either the man or the woman had realized with what they were confronted until they heard those ominous words of Lillian's. Both of them slumped in their seats and I think would have fallen to the floor if the guards had not supported them. It was the man who found his voice first.

"You mean," he said hoarsely, "that we're going to get the third degree if we don't squeal?"

"Oh! don't let us be so crude," Lillian answered blithely. "We're only going to ask you a few questions, and I'm sure you're going to answer them very nicely. Harry, will you take the man, and I'll carry on with Baby, here, so she won't be left alone without a sister woman to guide her. I'll want you, Ede, for a little while. Dicky, will you stay up here and take care of Madge?"

Young Child Develops Insomnia

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

"Dear Dr. Myers—Having read your advice for years, I am coming to you for a little help.

"My 11-year-old daughter has great difficulty getting to sleep at night. She had a nervous condition some time ago and although she is now in perfect health (I had her checked up by my doctor a short time ago), it worries me because she sometimes lies awake for two or three hours before going to sleep. Her school reports are excellent so I know she is not worried, but she claims she just cannot go to sleep. Due to the fact that I feel she needs the rest, I insist all lights out by eight o'clock. Have you any suggestions?"

My reply—It may be that you have shown so much concern over this problem that your daughter enjoys the attention. Never talk about it. Merely take the attitude that lying awake so long is a nuisance and waste of time, and that you might be able to help her correct it. No doubt she has a fertile brain and lies there thinking about things. Try to create a serene atmosphere by day. Don't let her listen to wild radio programs. It would be well if radio is off when the family is together.

Encourage Play.

Encourage her to play out-of-doors with other children her age, but not to excess. If she has music or dancing lessons, discontinue them for several months. Encourage her to experiment at baking and cooking and other manual efforts, so that she might dwell less on dreams. Permit very few movies, carefully selected. Check on her reading.

Take a walk with her each evening. Then give her a warm bath, a glass of warm milk and send her to bed. If she wishes to have door ajar, O. K. Don't go to her room after she turns off the light. Advise her not to get up after going to bed. It might encourage her to co-operate if you would give her a reward when she is sure she has made improvement, she reporting and you taking her at her word. I heard from many cases like this. Please write me of your results.

"Dear Dr. Myers—My eight-year-old girl must take the bus to school. She always makes it but I am generally a nervous wreck when she leaves. Can you help me?"

My reply—Calmly announce to her this evening that she will have to take responsibility for being ready for the bus tomorrow morning; that you will call her in good time but will not help her get ready or tell her once to hurry; that if she misses the bus she will have to stay indoors all day and sit doing nothing for exactly two hours—nothing to read, nothing to do, no radio. Then keep your word.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. My son, 17 years old, will suddenly announce on Friday evenings after school that he has a date with a girl or has to take a group of boys to a game. Perhaps we parents had planned to go out with the car that evening. Since we don't wish to disappoint him, he usually wins. What should we do?

A. Make clear to him that before making any definite plans to use the family car, he must first find out if you have plans to use it; that his parents come first.

HAVE SESSION.

Mrs. Walter Roselip was hostess for a meeting of the DeLuxe Pinochle club last evening at her home, 520 Bowman street. The diversion was in play at two tables, with prizes going to Mrs. L. L. Wolf and Mrs. R. C. Murray. Mrs. Arthur Metz won the traveling prize. Luncheon was served at the small tables. Mrs. Ethel Jackson was a guest of the club for the evening. Mrs. Murray will entertain the group on Dec. 6 at her home in the Ford apartments.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

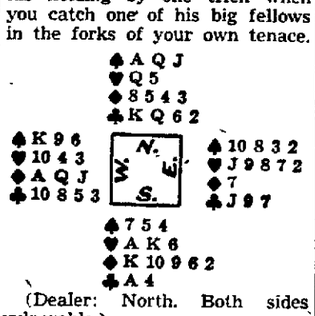
"The Authority on Authorities"

AN END PLAY MARKED

An opponent's double of your contract can mark him as holding of all the dangerous cards which are out against you. If they include a number of trump honors, your only way to avoid losing too many tricks to them may lie in making him lead away from his trump combination into your own. By managing to do this, you cut down the value of his holding by one trick when you catch one of his big fellows in the forks of your own tenace.



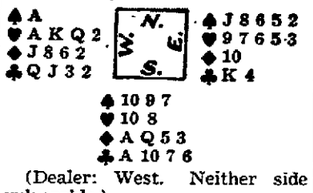
(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

A No-Trump game would have been like rolling off a long for North and South here, considering the location of the spade K, but they got into the much tougher contract of 5-Diamonds. North bid 1-Club, South 2-Diamonds, North 3-Diamonds and South 5-Diamonds, which West doubled.

The heart 10 was led to the Q. South figured the spade finesse would have to work, and he would also need a lead-throwing end-play in trumps to avoid the loss of three tricks there. So he came to his hand with the club A, finessed the spade J, returned with the heart A, finessed the spade Q, and then began an elimination process so that his own last three cards would be trumps. He cashed the spade A and club K, ruffed the club 6 to cut his own trumps by one, ruffed the good heart K in dummy, ruffed the good club Q to cut his trumps to three, and then led his diamond 9.

West was stuck. He won the trick with the diamond J, but then could get only one more trick with his spade A-Q, as he had to lead from the combination to South's K-10.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

If West, who had doubled, takes two hearts, then switches to the club 2, covered by East's K, how should South play to limit his losses at 3-Diamonds?

HOROSCOPE

For Friday, November 24.

MODERATELY enterprising and propitious conditions obtain on this day, according to the lunar transits. While new matters and dealings with those of influence and prestige should thrive, there are indications of certain undermining forces, boring deep from within with implements of treachery and subtlety. Alertness to these, even in domestic or personal affairs, may avert financial loss.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a fairly progressive and propitious year, if they will develop new projects with soundness and practical programs. These may enlist the support and confidence of those able to assist or promote them liberally, vanquishing certain subtle and persistent undermining forces.

A child born on this day may have fine constructive ability and executive power.

Peppers Add Delicious Flavor

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

PETER PIPER picked a pepper, but housewives pick peppers 12 months a year for flavor, interest and variety. They go Pete several better, for they pick peppers not only a pickle, but also to stuff, slice, mince, garnish and flavor. Green peppers are favorites, for they contain vitamins as well as important mineral elements. Try these recipes.

Pepper-Uppers are made by adding minced green pepers to cream cheese, and stuffing pitted dates with the mixture. Green pepper "ribbons" endear themselves to meat loaf—and to you. Grated or minced green pepper looks mighty nice on top of consomme or cream soup. Cubes of green pepper and chopped nuts enliven the humble cole slaw.

Shrimp-Stuffed Peppers require six medium-sized green peppers, five and one-half-ounce jar of shrimps, one and one-half cups grated American cheese, three-fourths cup soft bread crumbs, three-fourths cup chopped sweet pickles, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon peper, one and one-half tablespoon milk, one-half cup buttered bread crumbs, three tablespoons olive oil, two-thirds cup each chili sauce and water, and one-half clove garlic, finely minced. Cut thin slices from stem end of peppers. Remove seeds and white fibers. Parboil, uncovered, in large amount of boiling salt water five minutes. Invert and drain. Wash shrimps, remove black line along the back and cut in medium-sized pieces. Combine with cheese, bread crumbs, pickles, salt and pepper. Add milk gradually, tossing with a fork. Stuff peppers with mixture, and place in shallow baking dish. Top with buttered bread crumbs. Combine olive oil, chili sauce, water and garlic, and pour around peppers. Bake in 375 degree F. oven 35 to 45 minutes. Serve with sauce in pan. Six portions.

Grandmother Doesn't Act Old

By MME QUI VIVE

Until a woman is 100 years old she has a chance to stay young in spirit. It's just a matter of physical health and mental vitality. It used to be, in the days of our foremothers, that when a woman was forty she looked like sixty. Her interests were confined to the home; when the children married and flew away from the family nest, she had no occupation. Just hung around from one birthday to the next.

Many of our elderly women are executives; many others who have leisure and wealth are leading active lives, devoting their time to social work and charities. It is because of their being busy that old Pop Time can't tag 'em. They wear clothes as fashionable as the younger women, get their beauty treatments, have an intense interest in what is going on in the world.

Women start early to combat the evidences of the years. They don't let their faces take on accordion pleats, they keep the tissues and skin healthy by daily lubrications with nourishing creams. This practice is particularly necessary in advancing years when the cutaneous surface undergoes changes of texture and coloring.

The modern grandmother doesn't mourn about the "good old days." She knows they weren't very good. Took forever to get places when she was a girl. Clothes were cumbersome. No interest in outdoor sports. If you believed that woman should have the vote you were unwomanly, and if you liked to read other than novels you were a blue stocking. The successful wife was coy and clinging, wheedled her husband when she wanted a new black silk Sunday dress. To use powder wasn't nice, and indulging in commercial blushes meant that she was a painted lady and was immediately ousted from social circles.

The secret of our old-young ladies is that they keep the youthful viewpoint. They find that their grandchildren give them delightful companionship. Best of all, modern grandmothers mind their own business, don't try to run the lives of their sons and daughters and in-laws. That sort of a pastime is plain stupid, if not downright indecent.

Good posture is another factor in keeping young. The erect attitude provides opportunity for deeper respiration, which accelerates circulation, keeps arteries from hardening. If exercise is not advisable, many of the elderly ones have body treatments, the flesh oiled and treated with friction.

The importance of a smart, neat coiffure is not overlooked. Untidy hair makes for blowsiness and nice ladies do not look blowsy. They're neat as pins, sweet and fresh as the morning.

Students Home From Colleges; Guests From Cities In Ohio Fill Mansfield With Excitement; Some Folk Journey Afar.

By FRANCES E. GENSLEY

UM-M-M-M that roasting turkey smells good. I think I could sit down right this minute and eat a big drumstick and a spoonful of that dressing. May I have some of those nuts? Oh, you think they'll spoil my dinner? Well, all right, but they look awfully good. Say, by the way, what are you doing for the rest of the day? Yes, I know Dad will probably snore under the newspaper most of the afternoon, but I mean you and the rest of the family. Think you'll go to the game, calling, or just for a ride?

Oh, you don't think you'll do anything? You can't bet that lazy, why everybody in town is either going someplace or having guests. No mater which direction in town you go you'll see signs of plenty of holiday activity.

Excitement is really rampant out at the F. A. Klohs residence, 136 Parkwood boulevard, for both of the Klohs daughters are at home for the week-end. Dorothy came up from Ohio U. at Athens where she's a junior Tuesday night, and Ruth arrived from Columbus on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Place, 100 Glenwood boulevard, and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Linham, and their young son, Ted, 33 Glenwood boulevard, are all in Lima for a big Thanksgiving dinner. The Places formerly lived in Lima where they have a number of relatives.

Visitors here will be Mr. and Mrs. Warren Tracy of Columbus, and Mrs. A. O. Parkison, Shelby, who will spend the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kuntz, 441 Glessner avenue. Mrs. Tracy, a recent bride, and Mrs. Kuntz are the daughters of Mrs. Parkison.

Guests at Colby's.

The Gordon Colby's home is filled to overflowing today as Mrs. Colby's parents and sisters come up from Westerville. They are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morgan and daughters, Margaret and Ruth. Mrs. Colby's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Anderson and daughter Mary Margaret, from Columbus are also expected. And Bill Morgan, Mrs. Colby's brother, who is a student at Otterbein, will be here for the family party, too.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Hauserman, West Fourth street, will entertain Mrs. Hauserman's family from Athens for the holiday. Among the guests are her mother, Mrs. Margaret L. Jones, and her two sisters, Miss Gladys and Miss Geneva, and her aunt, Mrs. Myrtle Schmidt. Mrs. Jones will remain here all next week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Huber Bollman, 185½ West Third street, are spending Thanksgiving Day with Mrs. Bollman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Braun, Lorain, while the Bell family motored to Mansfield from London to spend the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Farry, 101 Stewart avenue. Those who come are Judge and Mrs. James Bell and sons Att'y. James Bell and William Bell and their daughter, Miss Virginia Bell. Judge and Mrs. Bell are the parents of Mrs. Farry.

Some In Akron.

Other holiday visitors are Mr. and Mrs. Robert McLaughlin, Reform street, are spending today with relatives in Willard, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lantz, 212 West Third street, and Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Russell and son, Bill 578 Coleman road, are in Akron today as the guests of relatives and firends.

Miss Alice Bower, Garfield place, is holidaying in Columbus, and Miss Virginia Rupp, a student at Flora Stone Mather college of Western Reserve university, is at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Rupp on the Alta road.

Richard McMullen, freshman at O. U., is another young person returned to the city for the holiday. He is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McMullen, Newman street. Mrs. Mary E. Thayer, 127 South Main street, has reversed the order. Instead of going away for the holiday she has just returned from Cincinnati where she visited her son-in-law, E. L. Hanover.

Laone Critchfield, who works in Cleveland, is adding plenty of happiness at her home today. She came down to spend the holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Critchfield, Rae avenue.

Considerable of the spirit of coming and going has invaded the city, and everyone seems to be buzzing back and forth this week. Doubtlessly many of you from whom we haven't yet heard are doing equally exciting things.

But let me tell you some more—

The Misses Helene and Elizabeth M. Otto, 158 Rae avenue, are driving to Battle Creek, Mich., to spend the week-end with friends while Mr. and Mrs. Fred N. Houwink, and daughter, Mary, of Detroit, arrived last night to spend Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Schoenly, 459 West Third street. Mr. and Mrs. Schoenly, will motor to Detroit Friday to spend the week-end and attend the Ohio State-Michigan football game.

MISS OSWALT BRIDE OF ALBERT J. KIPP

Thanksgiving Eve Chosen for Formal Nuptial Service at Central Methodist Church; Rev. R. S. Foulke, Pastor, Officiates.

By MARIANNE SPRINGER

THE palm and fern banked altar of the Central Methodist church was decorated with baskets of white chrysanthemums and pompons and lighted with two seven-branched candelabra for the pretty wedding of Miss Marjorie Ruth Oswalt and Albert J. Kipp yesterday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Nuptial music was furnished before the ceremony by Miss Miriam Oswalt, the bride's sister, and Miss Elizabeth Burneson. Miss Oswalt sang D'Hardelot's "Because" and "I Love You Truly" by Carrie Jacobs Bond. Organ selections by Miss Burneson included "Prelude to Act Three From Lohengrin," Friml's "Indian Love Call," "O Promise Me," by DeKoven, and "Salute D'Amour" by Elgar. During the service, which was read by Rev. R. L. Foulke, pastor of the church, Miss Burneson played "Peome" by Fibich. The traditional wedding marches by Lohengrin and Mendelssohn were also played.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Oswalt, Ashland road, was given in marriage by her father. Her wedding costume was of white tapestry moire with a short train, sweetheart neckline edged in self pleating and full Gibson Girl sleeves. She wore also a fingertip veil of bridal illusion and carried a colonial bouquet of gardenias, lilies-of-the-valley and white pompons. A feature of the costume was a small silver cross necklace, Mr. Kipp's gift to his bride.

The bride's twin sister, Miss Margaret Mary Oswalt, was her only attendant. She was attired in a gown of aqua taffeta fashioned with a tiered bustle and square neckline trimmed with self ruching. Her colonial bouquet was of yellow pompons, Talisman and Briarcliff roses.

Mr. Kipp, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Kipp, Lexington avenue, chose David Williams to be his best man. His brothers, Paul and Edward Kipp; the bride's brother, Wendell Oswalt; and Jack Davis seated the guests preceding the ceremony. Bows of white satin ribbon marked the relatives' pews.

A reception followed for 50 guests at the Oswalt home. The bridal table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake and decorated with white appointments. Mrs. Oswalt appeared in a wine velvet dress with matching accessories and a shoulder corsage of Talisman roses and yellow pompons tied with Talisman ribbons. Mrs. Kipp wore a corsage of Briarcliff roses and white pompons tied with pink satin ribbons with her blue crepe gown and matching accessories.

The couple is taking a southern motor trip now. For traveling Mrs. Kipp wore a grey wool dress with a black astrakhan jacket and black accessories. Upon their return to Mansfield, Mr. and Mrs. Kipp will live at the Oswalt residence on Ashland road. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kipp are graduates of Madison high school. She is an employe of the Farmers' Savings and Trust company, and he is employed at the Ohio Brass company.

MANSFIELDERS EAT TURKEY DINNERS

By MARGARET E. MATTOX

ALTHOUGH Thanksgiving day this year arrived a week earlier than in the past, Mansfielders still awoke this morning and were thankful—some giving thanks because today was a holiday and they could indulge in a few extra hours of sleep, while others awoke with the real Thanksgiving spirit and were up bright and early stuffing turkeys, baking pumpkin pies and preparing cranberry sauce.

The latter group included those who each year welcome relatives and friends to their homes for a day of feasting and reminiscing. To many of them it is the outstanding day of the year, the day on which their sons and daughters return for a visit, bringing their children with them and making it truly a day of thanksgiving for the grandparents.

Back in 1906 when Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shryock moved to Mansfield they issued invitations to their relatives to join them for Thanksgiving dinner. This year, 33 years later, the invitations were again issued, and have been extended each year with the exception of two.

Formerly Mr. and Mrs. Shryock presided as hosts for the dinner, but since the death of Mrs. Shryock in 1924, her daughter, Mrs. Goldie Hout, has assisted her father in entertaining. This year 20 relatives and friends have accepted invitations to the noonday dinner at the Shryock home, 51 Arthur avenue, with the following guests attending from out of town: Russell Shryock and Howard Farley, both students at Ohio State university, and Miss Peggy Bacchus, of Columbus.

Have Reunion

Thanksgiving Day also serves as a day of reunion for Mr. and Mrs. William T. Hursh's family at the Hursh residence, 312 West Third street. Two of their children, Paul Hursh of New York City, and Mrs. Marcus Schear will be unable to attend this year's dinner, but other relatives from out of the city who will partake of the traditional turkey dinner will be Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hursh, of Bellville; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dipert (Esther Hursh), of Vanlue; Mrs. Vera Freer and daughter, Phyllis, of Ashland, and Prof. and Mrs. E. M. Hursh, of Westerville.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Bond, 36 Sherman avenue, are entertaining 12 guests at their home today, including relatives as well as friends. Among the guests from out of town are Mrs. Fred Wolf, and children, Janet, Dick and Fred, of Chaska Beach on Lake Erie, and Mrs. G. W. Kenson, of Hollywood, Cal.

For more than 30 years, Mrs. Irilla Wappner, 177 South Diamond street, has observed Thanksgiving day by serving turkey dinner to her children and their friends. Today is no exception, and despite the fact that several of her children have married and moved away from Mansfield they are all planning to be at home with their mother today.

Dinner at the Wappner home will be served at noon, with the table being set for thirty guests, including Mr. and Mrs. Andy Grabor, (Margaret Wappner); Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wappner, and son, Charles, and daughter, Arlene, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Chaney, all of Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Ness (Alvina Wappner), of Fredericktown, and Miss Helen Gilmore, of Warsaw, Ohio.

Family Party.

Mrs. Frank B. Boals, 34 Waring avenue, is another Mansfield woman who looks forward each year to having her children take Thanksgiving dinner at her home. Today her guests will include not only her children, but also her grandchildren, David Hall Boals and Jeanne Boals, students at Ohio State university, and David's house guests, David Gray of Daytona Beach, Fla., and Charles Eaton, of New York City.

The R. J. Hancock home, 500 West Fourth street, is also the scene of festivity today with the Hancock children and grandchildren gathering for dinner.

Those attending from out of town are Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fisher (Caroline Hancock), and daughter, Judy, and Mr. and Mrs. Willis Krumlaw, (Betty Hancock), and son, Bill, all of Ashland; Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Hancock and son, Scott, of Shelby; and Mr. and Mrs. Russel Cline (Mabel Hancock), and son, Russell, of Kenton, Ohio. Also present are Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Donley, (Louise Hancock), and children, and Miss Hazel Underwood, of Mansfield.

A family dinner also is being served today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Baird, Crescent road, who are entertaining Mrs. Baird's mother, Mrs. Margaret Teeters, Miss Catherine Bernhardt, and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Teeters.

Handicap Offers 'Natural' to Hunch Players.

BOWIE, Md.—(AP)—Bowie's $10,000 Bryan and O'Hara handicap offered a "natural" to hunch players today—Mrs. Parker Corning's Thanksgiving. Assigned 121 pounds—just one pound less than the top-weighted and heavily-backed Challephen—the Maryland-bred distance runner was making his first start in this state since September.

Tygers Favored in Post-Season Battle Today

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL
(News-Journal Sports Editor)

THE track season is several months in the distance, but Coach Harry Mehock had something to be thankful for this Thanksgiving Day. With graduation putting a big hole in his Mansfield high school squad, Harry's delight in adding the name of John Caudle to his list of 1940 candidates can be imagined. Coudle, who recently moved here from Akron, was one of the running stars of the Akron Garfield team last spring.

Chicago's One Big School That's Low.

Figures from the U. S. office of education indicate that the best football, with a few exceptions, is being played by colleges with attendance and income well below the giants of the educational world. For instance, Chicago, which has an income second only to Minnesota, could hardly be rated with the "first 10" grid schools in the nation.

They'd Like to Know Anderson's Secret.

EDDIE ANDERSON will probably be tossed out of the Football Coaches Union any day now. In this era of moaning coaches, the Iowa mentor is being hailed as the coach of the year for curing the grid ills of his new school with a handful of leftovers and a few sophomores. A year ago the now powerful Nile Kinnick and company was able to win only one game, and that against Chicago.

"He can run and block and throw and tackle and kick, and above all he's smart," Zuppke commented today. "I'm going to recommend him for All-American."

SEATTLE—(AP)—For the second straight week Kay Eakin, the Arkansas workhorse, and Tom Harmon, Michigan's one-man offense, rank one-two as the nation's leading ground-gainers.

The American football statistical bureau offered figures today showing that Eakin, through his passing prowess, ranks first in total yards gained, while Harmon's ground sorties brought him a scant 15 yards behind. Eakin, in nine games, carried the ball 105 times for 318 yards.

Anderson Gets New Contract

Iowa Offers Coach Six-Year Term as Head of Hawkeye Grid Team.

IOWA CITY, Ia.—(U.P.)—University of Iowa football fans today cheered the announcement that Dr. Eddie Anderson, who in one year as Hawkeye football coach turned out a team that amazed the football world, will guide the school's football destinies until at least through the 1945 season.

The state board of control of athletics last night offered Anderson a new six-year contract, to replace his present three-year contract. Anderson said he was "very pleased" by the offer, is happy at Iowa and probably will accept.

Formal arrangements were expected to be delayed until after the Hawkeye's game with Northwestern Saturday. Salary provisions were not announced. Under his present contract he receives a reported $10,000 a year.

* * *

He is a former all-America from Notre Dame. He left the head coaching job at Holy Cross at the end of the 1938 season to come to Iowa, a school with a reputation for being a "graveyard" for football coaches. The Hawkeye team had been conceded little chance of winning more than two games this season but has lost only one—to Michigan—and counts among its triumphs upsets over Notre Dame and Minnesota. It has an outside chance to tie Ohio State for the Big Ten championship.

Case, Reserve Top Ohio Bill

Coach Edwards' Team Rules Slight Favorite.

Western Reserve game, one of Ohio's traditional Thanksgiving battles, headlined a state football menu of six contests today.

The Red Cats, shorn of their Big Four championship by defeats at the hands of Baldwin-Wallace and John Carroll, will be fighting only for prestige. Case, likewise out of the city title scramble will be after its first victory over Reserve under Coach Ray Ride.

The last time the Rough Riders came close was in 1933 when they fought their next-door neighbors to a tie.

Coach Bill Edwards' Cats, with most of their crippled in shape, were quoted as slight favorites, but all agreed anything could happen in the game.

The other Big Four schools also wind up their schedules today, Carroll traveling to Akron and B-W going to Ohio Wesleyan. The Clevelanders entered both tussles as favorites.

The other traditional holiday battle was down for the other corner of the state, with Cincinnati playing host to Miami.

Other games of the day find Toledo at Xavier and West Virginia at Wilberforce.

MANSFIELD BOY PLAYS LAST GAME SATURDAY

F. Lionel Culp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Culp of 286 Marion avenue, will have his last chance to play college football Saturday when the Heidelberg college eleven invades West Virginia for the season's finale with Bethany college. "Red," as he is known by his friends, came out for football in mid-season and made the team. He is senior class president at Heidelberg.

Ned Day Struts In Madison Film

"Set 'Em Up," a Pete Smith movie short dealing with bowling, will appear on the Madison screen with two full-length pictures starting Saturday and continuing through Tuesday, Gratton Johnston, manager of the playhouse, announced today.

In the film, Smith discovers Pop, Mom, Willie, Mary, Grandma and "Butch," Mary's boy friend, trying their hand at bowling. They are doing everything wrong, so Pete presses a button and up springs Ned Day, American match champion, to straighten things out.

Ned proceeds to teach the entire family—and "Butch"—how to bowl. Instead of being done with mirrors, Ned and Pete do it with cameras and animated white lines. Andy Varipapa, trick bowler, also is in the film.

Cuyahoga Falls To Be Tackled On Soggy Grid

Band's Benefit Game Expected to Draw 7,000; Hershey's Status to Be Learned at Noon.

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

TODAY was to bring a belated climax to the football season at Stadium field.

The Turkey day sports feature involved a post-season clash between Coach Paul Snyder's Tygers and Cuyahoga Falls at Stadium field, with the Mansfield high school band as a co-sponsor.

Scheduled at 2:30 p. m., the holiday grid meeting was expected to lure a crowd of 7,000, which will help provide funds for the purchase of new uniforms for Director J. Merton Holcombe's musicians.

A comparison of records gives the Tygers a decided edge on paper, but the Falls was looked upon as a foe capable of pressing the bengal squad.

Rains which left the gridiron in a soggy condition was expected to hamper play of both teams, but Coach Snyder hoped that the weatherman made no mistake in his prediction of "a bright and warm Thanksgiving afternoon.

There was not expected to be enough difference in the weights to give either team the edge on a muddy field, but a soft turf is likely to reduce the effectiveness of their running games, particularly their wide plays.

* * *

Snyder, however, is well supplied with hammering fullbacks in Martin Henke and Marshall Smith,

CUYAHOGA FALLS TO BE TACKLED ON SOGGY GRID

send the sprinters into the open.

Aerial maneuvers will probably who will be asked to take up the slack if the field is too soft to be sidetracked for a straight running attack as it would be dangerous to heave a muddy pigskin.

Mansfield's victory hopes received a definite blow this week when it was learned that the injury suffered by Halfback Howard Hershey in Saturday's 34 to 0 triumph over Shelby may keep him out of action today.

Hershey sustained an injury to his right shoulder, and it has not responded to treatment as well as Snyder had hoped. The team physician will determine whether or not Hershey will be permitted to play at noon today, Snyder said.

If Hershey, one of Snyder's ace ball carriers is unable to start, Jim Templeton, a sophomore, will get the call at the right halfback post, Snyder stated.

Outside of the injured halfback, the Mansfield squad is in the proverbial "pink," and the starting lineup will not be changed in the other positions.

Today will mark the farewell appearance of 21 Tygers in grid toggery.

The seniors on the squad are Capt. Mike Horvath, Russell Beer, Edward Goettl, Robert Guegold, Jack Hughes, James LeMunyon, Joe Logan, Ross Loughman, Gene Miller, Glendon Parr, John Pfahler, Alex Radovich, Harold Remy, Robert Sandel, Paul Sauder, Marshall Smith, David Templeton, Richard Weaver, Richard White and William Rowe.

If Hershey is permitted to start, Henke and Bob Lantz will be the only hold-overs for next year's team who will be in the lineup at the kickoff.

Although only a junior, the game will also mark the end of Hershey's scholastic grid career as his age will make him ineligible next season.

The Tygers' record for the season consists of six victories and three defeats, the setbacks being administered by Massillon, New Philadelphia and Canton McKinley.

Incidentally, the three teams which defeated the Tygers were the only clubs to score on Mansfield this year.

Cuyahoga Falls, coached by the veteran Earl Loucks, sr., formerly of Martins Ferry, where he produced several of the state's outstanding teams, has won four games, lost the same number and tied two.

The Falls made an impressive comeback after a slow start in Louck's coaching debut there.

Highlights of the Cuyahoga Falls' season were victories over Akron Garfield and Central and a scoreless tie with Barberton.

Mainstays of the Cuyahoga Falls backfield are Ted Coy, shifty quarterback, and Earl Loucks, jr., a crushing fullback. Art Taylor, right tackle, is regarded as one of the outstanding linemen in the Akron area.

QUICK! LEMME HAVE YER CROWN
OUCH!

PAM—David! By A. W. Brewerton

OH—I'M SO GLAD DAVID IS BACK! MAYBE HE CAN HELP FIGURE OUT WHAT'S BEST TO DO ABOUT POOR LITTLE JENNY! I KNOW HE'S AWFULLY BUSY NOW ON WORK FOR THE GOVERNMENT, IN CONNECTION WITH THAT TERRIBLE WAR!
11-23
—SEEMS WE HAVE TO KEEP A CLOSE WATCH OVER HERE FOR SPIES AND ALL KINDS OF DOINGS THAT MIGHT INVOLVE US IN TROUBLE—GET US INTO THAT FRIGHTFUL WAR!—OH, DEAR!—AND THEN I'M SO ANXIOUS TO HAVE DAVID'S REACTION TO CLARE'S FRIEND, CRAIG SAWYER! I DON'T THINK DAVID EVEN KNOWS THAT THEY ARE ENGAGED! IT WAS ALL SO SUDDEN WITH CLARE—
I'M SO SORRY I DIDN'T TAKE TO CRAIG MORE—SHE'S SO IN LOVE WITH HIM—AND I WANT SO MUCH TO SEE HER HAPPY—SHE'S A PEACH OF A GIRL!—DAVID SAID HE'D BE BY FOR ME AT CLOSING TIME—I'M CRAZY TO SEE HIM AGAIN!
HOW'S YOUR LITTLE "MYSTERY GIRL" TODAY, PAMELA?
SHE'S STILL IN A FOG, COLONEL CAREY—SHE'S SITTING UP AT THE HOSPITAL NOW, BUT SHE'S SO DEPRESSED—SO WAN AND WEAK—I—I'M AFRAID TO TAKE HER HOME—SHE'D HAVE TO BE ALONE THERE SO MUCH,
WILL DAVID BE ABLE TO SOLVE JENNY'S MYSTERY?

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE—Woman's Place. By Harold Gray

WHY, I HAVE A PERFECT RIGHT TO GO TO THE STORE IF I WANT TO—HOW DARE YOU TRY TO STOP ME?
I'M SORRY AS I CAN BE, MRS. TECUM—BUT IT'S MY ORDERS—
11-23-39
OH, BUT IT'S SO SILLY—WHAT POSSIBLY HARM COULD COME TO ME, JUST GOING A FEW BLOCKS IN BROAD DAYLIGHT?
WE'LL NEVER KNOW THAT, MRS. TECUM, BECAUSE YOU WON'T BE GOIN', YOU KNOW—
JUST GIVE US YER LIST, MRS. TECUM—CLANCY WILL HANDLE IT—HE'S AN AWFUL CAREFUL SHOPPER—
THAT I AM, MRS. TECUM—EVEN ME MASSUS SAYS SO—AND I'LL HURRY RIGHT BACK—
OH, I SHOULD BE GRATEFUL—YOU MEN ARE GUARDING US ON YOUR OWN TIME—IT'S AWFULLY KIND OF YOU—
IT'S NOTHIN' WE AREN'T GLAD TO DO—YOUR HUSBAND'S A FINE LAD—
HAROLD GRAY

FILIPINOS NOT SO SURE THEY WANT FREEDOM

Old Issue Revives; Natives Wonder If Japs Won't Gobble Them Up.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Do the Filipinos, Uncle Sam's wards since 1898, really want their independence? With the world in turmoil and small nations disappearing from the map, there has been much soul-searching on this question among the inhabitants of the islands. The United States at present is committed to turn the islands loose in 1946, without benefit of the American navy's protection or the American sugar market. To test sentiment the Associated Press polled strategically placed men throughout the islands. The following article is the result)

By R. R. CRONIN, JR.
(Associated Press Writer)

MANILA -- Independence once more is a live issue in the Philippines. The question is being as heatedly debated as it was in the three decades before 1934 when the promise of independence was given by the United States.

The Filipinos are not so sure now they want their freedom. Overwhelming belief that Japan, a great expanding power, would be a menace to an independent Philippine republic is the explanation.

The Associated Press made an island-wide survey to determine how the people feel about it.

Forty-one Filipino newsmen in provincial capitals were the source. The returns indicated a decided trend toward postponement of independence beyond July 4, 1946, as provided in the Tydings-McDuffie act, with indefinite continuation of the present commonwealth government. Eventual independence remained a national ideal.

The survey showed that thousands of a total population of 16,000,000 do not know what it is all about. Most of these persons do not vote, or vote as local political leaders dictate.

The politicos, for the most part, are for independence when they talk out loud. They have been preaching it for 40 years and if they backtrack now they will "lose face," something no Filipino can tolerate.

Off the record some of the politicos have their doubts as to the wisdom of independence in the near future. They know that with the American flag flying over the islands the Philippines are comparatively safe economically and defensively. They have watched with misgivings the Japanese war on China and the wiping out of sundry small European republics.

See Threat To Pocketbooks.

Manuel L. Quezon, president of the commonwealth government, recently expressed anxiety over the future of the Philippines. He did not refer directly to independence but appealed to the people to make a close study of the trend of international affairs in their relation to the Philippine problem.

The wealthier classes of Filipinos, the land-owning middle classes and many business interests, especially sugar, do not want independence if it crumps their pocketbooks, knocks the bottom out of land values, or ruins trade.

American business interests in the islands do not relish the idea of independence. These interests, representing a total investment of approximately $260,000,000, are closely allied with the American free trade market.

If forced to pay full export and import duties they say they they cannot compete. On exports they must consider the long and costly haul from the Philippines to the United States. On imports they must buck low-labor-cost Japanese products.

Many of the estimated 3,000 Americans in the islands do not believe the American flag will come down in 1946, the most important reason being that the Philippines afford America a strong foothold in the Far East.

Even champions of freedom admit that the loss of the duty-free American market would result in economic chaos for the entire population.

The Philippines grow five main crops—sugar, coconuts, hemp, tobacco and rice. The first four are for export. Rice is a domestic crop.

Two million persons, one-eighth of the population, would be directly affected if sugar was wiped out. Three million would be hit by collapse of the coconut industry.

Sugar alone brings to the islands about half the money received from abroad. Eliminate that income, plus the return from coconuts, and the domestic rice market, directly affecting 6,000,000 workers, would suffer because the buying power of the masses would dwindle to the disappearing point.

DRIVER FOOLED

GREYBULL, Wyo. — Greybull sheriff's authorities are still searching for a man who recently stationed himself at the mouth of Shell canyon in a uniform and charged motorists a toll fee of $2 a car. Tourists reported that when they asked what the toll was for, the man replied: "We have to have money to build these expensive mountain highways." Authorities pointed out there are no toll charges anywhere in Wyoming.

CHURCH'S NOISE BOTHERS TAVERN

DALLAS, Tex. —(INS)— What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, one Dallas saloon operator apparently believes. He called the district attorney's office to complain about noise from a nearby church. "Why, when they turn that darn loud-speaker on and sing all those hymns, my customers can't hear the music from the nickelodeon."

Although protests from churches have caused silencers to be placed on several Dallas taverns, the district attorney's office said it couldn't do anything about the reverse situation.

The Big Kick in Not Being Rich

YES, it's nice to have a lot of money to spend. But don't forget there's also plenty of fun to be had "on the way up" to affluence.

There's the satisfaction of achieving something better than you're used to—stepping up, for instance, to this smart, swift, solid Buick after you've been driving run-of-the-mill cars.

Just you feel the silk-smooth surge of its great 107 horsepower micro-poise-balanced straight-eight engine—and you know that all that went before was only preliminary to this big thrill.

You flip the firm, easy gearshift—and the click of its action under your hands says here's the real thing in precision-made mechanisms, not just a stopgap to tide you over.

You roll your steady, even-going, firm-riding way, and the taut, staunch, everywhere-substantial feel of this fine carriage brings a sense of "getting somewhere" as satisfying as your first gilt-edged bond.

You've got action in this honey. You've got style. You've got value, and everybody knows it. You've got life—you'll romp up hills and tame the wide-open spaces and doff your cap to no one on the way.

And there's nothing light, or loose, or tinny, or labored about it anywhere. Here's the sure, steady, take-it-in-stride demeanor of a car that's competent-plus.

Suppose you have to stretch a bit to buy this Buick—well, you'll find that will only make you prize this great eight all the more!

So go look at the car that can mark a milestone in your life. It doesn't cost a thing to find out how little a really good car will stand you delivered.

Only car in the world with all these features

HOW THIS PLAY ENDS IS PUZZLE

Audience to Serve as Jury In Community Players' First Production Dec. 5.

When the Mansfield Community Players present their first play of the season at Senior High school auditorium, Dec. 5, no one, not even the directors or the players, will know how the play ends until the final curtain.

One of the most unique bits of theater technique, "The Night of January 16" is written with two endings, and which one will be chosen is known only at the end of the play.

It is based on the always fascinating mystery of the late Ivar Kreuger, Swedish match king, whose suicide or disappearance is still a matter of conjecture. In the play, the Swedish financial wizard is killed or dies and a young woman is accused of murdering him on the night of Jan. 16.

The entire action of the play takes place in a court room and the jury is chosen from the audience. None of it is arranged before the play so that no one knows who will be called.

After the jury hears the evidence it brings in a verdict according to its own beliefs and not the playwright's. If the verdict is "guilty," the players finish the play with one ending and if the defendant is found not guilty, another ending is ready.

Mrs. Jack Berno, a newcomer to the Community Players, has the leading role of the accused young woman.

Driver Lives After Steering Wheel Crashes Thru Seat.

COLLIERS, N. Y.—(AP)—Philip Ryan lived to tell of the crash in which the steering post of his truck was driven back through the driver's seat.

Ryan was thrown to the floor and escaped with a bruised knee as the machine went out of control on a hill, took out two guard posts, skittered along a steep bank, and crashed into another bank where it virtually broke in two.

Liederkranz Marks Thanksgiving With Play

Savant Finds Rainfall In Last War Not Unusual.

DALLAS, Tex. — (AP) — There wasn't any more mud in Flanders fields than usual when American soldiers fought there. It just seemed like more, says Dr. Edwin J. Foscue of Southern Methodist university.

Dr. Foscue heard so many assertions that the heavy cannonading of World war days brought a deluge, he decided to investigate scientifically.

Studying climatological data, he compiled the true story of rainfall at the western front and found:

The four years of the conflict were not unusual rain. In fact, the first two years were only slightly above normal and the last two, when the American troops were in France, were below normal. Hence, the detonation of high explosives seemingly had no influence upon the total precipitation.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1939.

Grateful Nation Gives Thanks

OBSERVANCE of Thanksgiving day is so entirely an American custom that it probably has little significance to people of other countries—or even to all of those who come within its direct influence.

For Thanksgiving is primarily a holy day, rather than a holiday, and links so definitely with religion that its observance in other than a reverential way clashes with all ideas of propriety.

It was in a spirit of thankfulness to God for meager blessings that those pioneering ancestors of present-day Americans observed the first Thanksgiving in 1621—more than three hundred years ago.

The mere act of giving thanks presupposes recognition of a superior power exerting itself in behalf of mankind, and a vast majority of people have chosen to call this Power by the name of God, and to direct their prayers of thanks and supplication to Him.

In its later development Thanksgiving day has been broadened in the scope of its observance until now it is recognized as a national feast day, with possibly more of a physical than spiritual appeal, yet with at least partial retention of its original purpose—a unified expression of thanks to God for blessings bestowed upon individuals, families, communities, states and the nation.

If this real intent of Thanksgiving should ever be entirely lost sight of there would be no justification for the holiday—and it may even now be wondered if such an occasion might not be better suited to Sunday, rather than mid-week observance.

For those who are inclined to observe this holiday in the same spirit of thankfulness that inspired those who met together on that first Thanksgiving day, as well as earlier-day Americans who brought in through the intervening generations, there will be no dearth of things for which to express thanks today, coupled with a prayer that it may be the will of God that the peoples of the earth will soon find a way to distribute His bounties more equitably and to bring permanent peace to all nations.

Causes Should Be Disclosed

THEORIES so frequently clash with actualities that problems of juvenile delinquency are seldom adaptable to set rules.

There is the incident of the Mansfield boy who started a term in the Lancaster industrial school on his seventeenth birthday anniversary, as mentioned in yesterday's paper.

He is recorded as having been in juvenile court fifteen times within the past three years, and to have confessed the theft of more than a dozen bicycles in recent months.

A case history of this boy would be interesting—not for publicity, but for the help it might be in steering other children away from the pitfalls which beset this lad.

To be successfully combatted, conditions which result in juvenile delinquency must be individualized rather than bulked. Just how did those directly concerned, and the community as a whole, fail in permitting this boy to become a liability instead of an asset? Was it the home, the school, the church, the environment and example, or some elusive mental or physical quirk, that caused his delinquency?

When more attention is paid to the CAUSES of youthful misbehavior, and more effort made to remove those causes, there will be fewer "problem children" and fewer adult law violators.

Non-Pay Leisure Time Work

THE PROBLEM of what a wealthy man, who doesn't have to earn a living, can do with his leisure time, has been nicely solved by Barklie Henry, a New York millionaire who devotes at least half of his time to duties of the presidency of the Community Service society, a welfare organization designed to help the needy in his home city.

His philosophy explains the reason for giving so freely of his time to philanthropic work. He says: "I believe that people who are lucky enough to have money should spend a large part of their time earning their keep by doing non-pay work useful to the society which supports them—and there is plenty of it to be done."

Practically every large city has at least a few men who live, accumulate wealth, eventually die and are soon forgotten, who might take a hint from the New York man and devote a portion of their surplus money and leisure time to some phase of community service that would benefit others and serve as a lasting memorial to themselves.

Merely bestowing charity is not enough—the "non-pay work" to which Mr. Henry makes reference is also an essential part of community service.

Hemispheric Trade Bloc

THE Pan-American Treasury Conference in Guatemala City, attended by representatives from nineteen of the American republics, has been considering a system of uniform customs regulations and terms to simplify shipping and passenger service in the Western Hemisphere. The first plans called for a commission of five to present a report at the next meeting, a year hence. Many experts hope plans can be prepared sooner.

The people favoring such a system believe it will greatly promote travel and trade among the American republics. They insist that if we in this hemisphere want to stand together for peace, we must also stand together for economic co-operation.

Horses Still Needed In War

THIS isn't really a horseless war, after all. French buyers came to Chicago recently seeking horses to pull chuck wagons and guns through mire that still makes trouble for the powerful tractor. The horse population of this country isn't what it was twenty-five years ago. There were more than 21,000,000 horses then and more than 4,800,000 mules. Today there are only 10,800,000 horses and 4,382,000 mules.

Humanitarians have long interposed objections to using horses in war—but while men's lives are being thus sacrificed, other considerations seem too minor to be seriously considered.

A scientist predicts that at some future time men will have only twelve teeth—by which time painless dentistry, also, will probably have made further advancement.

With reported increase in the use of soap in the Soviet Union it is being predicted that much more will be heard in the future about those White Russians.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — In spite of statements laying on British agents the responsibility for the Munich beer hall bombing, it is better than an average gamble that Herr Hitler doesn't sleep well these nights wondering if some of his friends had a hand in the business.

Doubtless the British would not go into mourning over any tragedy which might overtake the Reichskanzler. But if the British did it Hitler has reason to reorganize his police.

Being dictator is a nice job but it has its drawbacks. A man can't trust even his friends. Often enough the rise to power is measured in sword-thrusts. So it was both in Germany and Russia. The purges in those two countries caught up old friends and foes alike. The victims often were merely suspected of wanting to do what someone in Germany actually tried to do in planting the bomb in the beer garden in Munich.

In dictatorial Italy, the purge was accomplished in rough humor with quarts of castor oil forced down the throats of hapless suspects. There the method seems to have produced less bitterness than in the other two dictatorships but even Mussolini has been fired upon and now carries a nick in his nose from an assassin's bullet.

Historic Parallels.

TRAGEDIES have been written aplenty about just such situations as that in Germany. The haunted sleep-walking of Lady Macbeth and the tormented waking hours of Macbeth himself hint at the mental turmoil that one might find parallel in Berlin in these hours of strain and trouble.

More than one country has in its hitsory the story of a ruler haunted quite as much by distrust of his friends as by fear of his enemies. In the tragi-comedy tone of so many stories of the Orient comes the ancient tale of Chin (or Tsin) She Hwang Ti, who first brought China under one rule and left it his name.

Master once of only the huge northwest interior of China, the Emperor Chin Shi conquered all of China proper. To keep out external enemies, he built the great Chinese Wall which has lasted through 2,000 years.

He destroyed books and literature in a cultural liquidation not equalled until modern days across the Atlantic. Scholars were hunted out and advisors put to the sword as the great emperor sought to preserve his mastery and his peace of mind.

Finally, fearing even the gods were after him, he built a monster palace of a thousand rooms. There he believed neither god nor man would know in which room to lurk on any given night.

Lot Is Not Happy One.

"UNNATURAL deeds do breed unnatural troubles," sadly commented the doctor in Shakespeare's tragedy as he observed the disintegration of the Macbeths. "Infected minds to their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets."

In what manner the nerves of the Reichskanzler react to the attempt on his life is a matter almost wholly of speculation. Yet it takes no especially profound imagination to deduce that Hitler would like to know for SURE who planted that bomb. Was it a close and trusted friend grown envious? Or was it simply some malcontent who easily can be kept far away hereafter? Into this world of war the situation injects a stark personal drama.

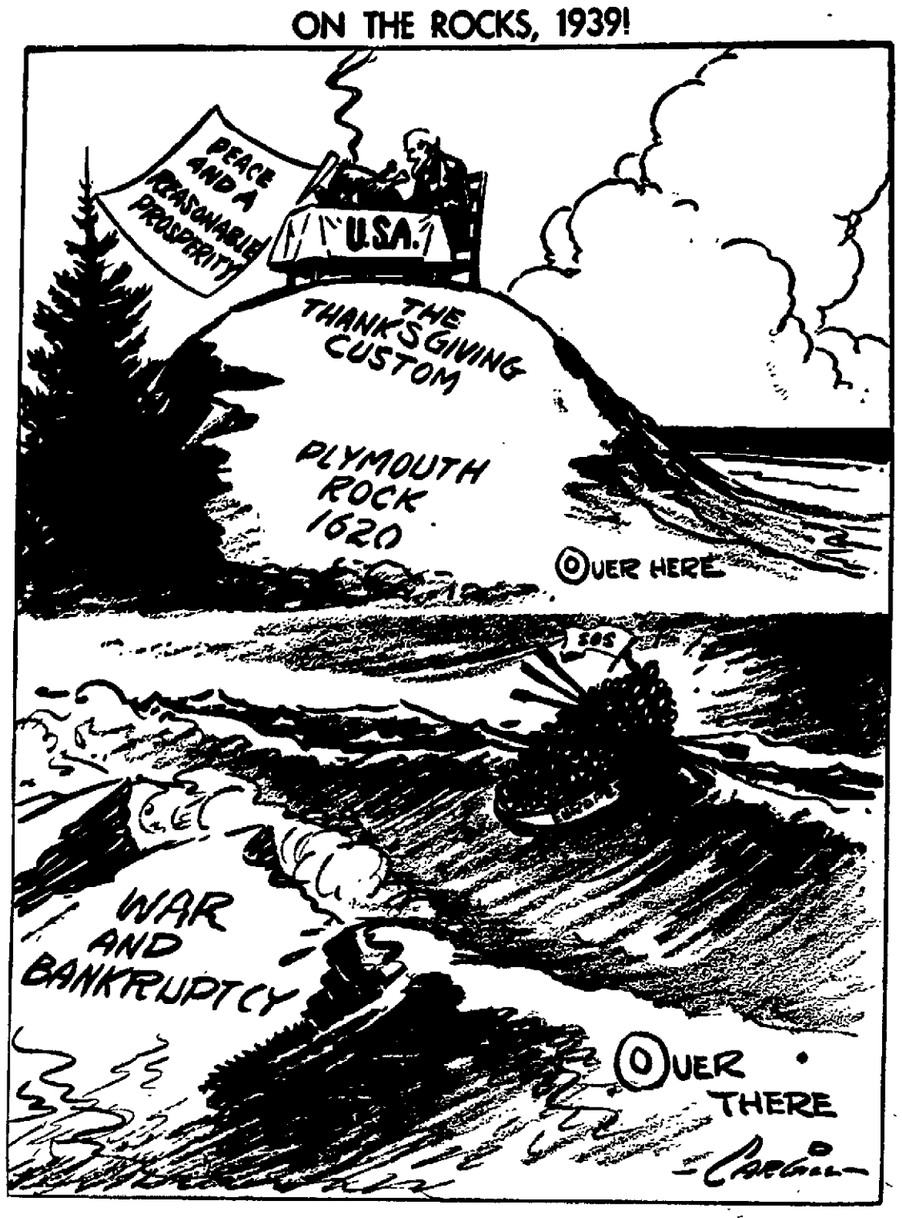
ON THE ROCKS, 1939!



Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—You've met Frank Capra.

He's Longfellow Deeds. He's Senator Smith. He's the footloose reporter in "It Happened One Night." He's Grandpa in "You Can't Take It With You." He's the grimly determined young man in "Lost Horizon," beating his way over Tibetan snows back to his Shangri-La.

As far as the record goes, he's a little Sicilian newsboy on the streets of Los Angeles who became one of Hollywood's greatest producer-directors. But he's all of those others, too. He told me so.

It happened this way. We were passing an idle hour in Capra's commodious suite high up in the Waldorf. We were mulling over the amazing string of Capra successes. Capra calls it luck.

"You have to have a theme," he says, "and you have to have people, real people. But after that it's just a prayer and luck."

SURE, Mr. Capra, just luck. Just an accident, I suppose, that for years nearly all of your successful heroes have had a great many things in common. They are nice clean-cut young fellows, generally with a small-town outlook that avoids the curse of big city provincialism. They have ideals and patriotism and courage and a sense of humor. They win over obstacles. And they nearly always get their girl. Of course, Grandpa wasn't exactly like that, but Grandpa was a philosopher and he had all of those things in his philosophy. Where, Mr. Capra, did you get all those heroes? They couldn't be Mr. Capra, could they, Mr. Capra?

He was a long time answering, staring out into crisp New York winter sunshine and then he said he never thought much about it, but he guessed they were Mr. Capra or at least the fellow Mr. Capra would like to be.

And there you have it. A group of gentlemen as alike as peas in a pod, really, even if they're ballyhooed as Clark Gable, James Stewart, Gary Cooper or Joe Doaks. They're all Frank Capra.

The point is that they are as American as a Fourth of July parade and they are all the creation of a little Sicilian newsboy who sold papers on the streets of Los Angeles and grew up to be one of Hollywood's greatest.

NOT even the biggest boxoffice of the year (which is an odds-on possibility) will compensate Capra for the fact that "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" got something of a kicking around in the nation's capital.

The little Sicilian's patriotism is intense and he put all he had into "Mr. Smith."

By his own word, his purpose was that this is the greatest of all democracies and nothing—not even scandal in the senate—can dent it. That's all he had to say. And it seems to me he said it well. If there was yelling in Washington it must have been from some of the youngsters who have forgotten the Teapot Dome, the affair Bailey, or the Tragic Era that followed the Civil war.

It's surprising that any one in Washington would bother to get so wrought up about it. After all, Mr. Capra was born in Palmero He can't ever be president.

Briefly Told.

One out of nine persons works for the government and the other eight work for him.—Longview News.

Listen, World!

Thankful Heart and Giving Hand—

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

grape fruit
canned soup
sweet potatoes
cranberry sauce
chicken—maybe—
hamburger—perhaps!
pumpkin pie
raisins and nuts for the kids—

THERE you have it—scribbled on a bit of wrapping paper, tucked into the corners of millions of shabby shopping bags—the Makings of the Average American Thanksgiving Dinner. And a better-than-middlin' one at that.

Doesn't sound very exciting, does it! Not much like those gorgeous gorgings of early colonial times. What a laughing and a chaffing there was, at those first Thanks Givings . . . what a glory of color and smell! Trenched fires blazing in the open . . . fat joints turning on the spits . . . shoat and pheasant, grouse and deer, salmon, rabbit, coon and bear! And the hand-hewn boards heaped high with the pickings from a hundred fields and kitchens—pumpkins, apples, cakes and pies . . . tankards of brown ale . . . And the golden light lying gentle as the blessing of God Himself on the resting fields . . . And a voice saying, above a sudden hush, "Father, we give Thee thanks!"

Ah, the grand thought of it! Warms your blood, doesn't it? Then you think of that humdrum grocery list and the glow fades. How drab life is today, how petty and purposeless. No great moments for us, such as our fathers knew, no sense of majesty in our common lives.

BUT you're wrong! Life wasn't all beer and skittles for those old chaps any more than it is for us today. Take away the glamour history has lent them and they are a few, weak men battling a wilderness. There were loneliness, sickness and poverty to be endured. Redskins lurking in the forests, wolves and panthers on the trails. And many a mouth that was set for turkey had to chew on jerkie, instead.

But, because of their very weakness and isolation, they had discovered a secret which would take the sting out of any pain or fear. They had discovered the beauty of Giving — the blessedness of Sharing. Giving and Sharing, these could turn the humblest meal into a banquet, make the weariest beggar feel like a king.

Giving and sharing . . . America was built on those two "acts of grace." Weak men against a vast and savage wilderness . . . if they had hoarded and huddled they would have been lost. But by banding together, by putting what they had in one common pool, they found confidence, courage and cheer.

Giving and sharing—by these, wilderness was cleared . . . settlements became cities . . . vagrants became citizens . . . the noblest dream the human heart ever conceived, became a mighty nation.

Giving and sharing, these are our strength now as they were in the past—and our salvation. Today we face a darker wilderness than ever our fathers knew—a crueller circle of greed and hate. One thing only can withstand that hate—and keep us, as a people, whole and free. Not force. Not selfish hoarding. BUT SHARING AND GIVING AS OUR FATHERS SHARED AND GAVE THREE HUNDRED YEARS AGO . . . IN LOVE FOR ALL . . . WITH THANKS TO GOD FOR HIS ABUNDANCE.

Thanksgiving, 1939

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

Thanksgiving, surely we have much
For which, in gratitude.
We can give thanks beyond the boon
Of clothes and homes and food.

So rich our land, it flows with "milk
And honey" as of old
A Bible land, and we have stores of flocks and shining gold.

For all of this we will give thanks
But as our prayers arise
There will be, too, another one
Borne through the mystic skies.

"Lord, we are grateful for our gifts
Grant us one more," the plea:
"Lord, help us to keep out of it.
This war across the sea."

As Others See It

Honest About It.

Daughter is honest when she says that everybody is doing a certain thing. She really thinks that the worst people are everybody.—Kansas City Times.

Observation.

Public statues of a steel that lasts forever are a new possibility. And yet, considering some of the statues, we prefer destructible marble.—Detroit News.

Pointed Paragraphs

Silence is a difficult argument to beat.

A genius is a fool who succeeds; a fool is a genius who fails.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Republican strategists are planning a national defense surprise of their own when congress reassembles in January. They are going to demand an investigation of the management of the army and navy.

There is plenty of ammunition to justify this. While billions are being poured out to build up national defense, the command of the two defense services is mired in welters of bureaucracy, antiquated methods and personal jealousies.

The Republicans plan to probe Roosevelt's continued failure to give the navy a definite head, the cat-and-dog fight in the war department, and the sensational disclosures regarding the newly built top-heavy destroyers.

The Republicans privately calculate that they can kill two birds with one shot.

First, they aim to force an urgently needed revitalization of the army and navy's commands—both civilian and military. Second, they hope to emphasize the Republican contention that the New Deal can't run the government competently and a change is needed.

Victim.

FOR Assistant Secretary Charles Edison, overworked acting head of the navy, there is bitter irony in all this. A navy probe, with its certain revelations of obstructive bureaucracy and resistance to modernization, may cost him his well-deserved chance to be made a full member of the cabinet.

Edison has striven to cut through red tape and weed out antiquated practices and brass hats, but the job is too much for one man and he has worked himself near collapse trying to cope with it. Despite his blamelessness, the splatter of disclosures is sure to fall on his head.

Why Roosevelt has not named Edison, or someone else, to the long vacant secretaryship remains a mystery. Best inside explanation is that the president enjoys being his own secretary of the navy.

Supreme Court Romeo.

TO THE casual observer, Justice James Clark McReynolds seems to keep his health despite 78 summers. However, those who saw him with lovely Mrs. Lionel Atwill think he has lost his punch.

Mrs. Atwill returned from Hollywood to Washington recently, causing friends to reminisce about the days when, as Louise Brooks and later as Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, she was the most popular woman in Washington. One of her great admirers was General John Pershing, her constant escort at social functions.

At one of these Justice McReynolds, always with an eye to feminine beauty, planted a lusty liss publicly on the lips of Louise. Then, much embarrassed, he apologized profusely to General Pershing.

When Louise Atwill returned to Washington the other day, she lunched at the Supreme Court, and again she saw McReynolds.

"But this time," laughed Mrs. Atwill, "he looked at me as if he was surveying the devastated areas."

War Orders.

PAUL VAN ZEELAND, ex-Premier of Belgium, has been spreading some quiet words of caution regarding the amount of war orders to be expected—or rather not to be expected—from France and Great Britain.

Few people realize, he points out, how much the productive capacity of the allies has increased. It is far greater than in 1914, and, except for a few specialized products, the allies can produce most of what they need under their own steam.

Furthermore, Van Zeeland emphasizes, the British are going to switch all war orders possible to Canada, in an attempt to build up its industry on a permanent basis, perhaps even with the idea of shifting much of the United Kingdom's industry to the Dominion where it will be safe from future wars.

Van Zeeland reports that Hitler's finances are worse than most people realize, and predicts that the war will be short. But this definition of "short" is two years.

Note—Van Zeeland has been visiting the United States as counsel for the International Refugee conference.

Coughlin's Broadcasts.

FATHER COUGHLIN'S followers are flooding the Federal Communications commission with protests against his "suppression" under the new National Association of Broadcasters code. This is giving FCC officials a big laugh.

They recall a previous flood of complaints from individuals who demanded time to answer the radio priest's fulminations, but were unable to buy it. Now the shoe is on the other foot.

Coughlin cannot buy time because of the controversial nature of his broadcasts, though, under the code, he is entitled to free time—on the condition that an equal period of free time be given to reply to him.

Landon and Hoover.

ONE Republican leader who is firmly convinced that Herbert Hoover is an active candidate for the 1940 nomination is Alf Landon.

At a private gathering of Iowa leaders following Alf's recent speech in Shenandoah, Ia., the politicians were sounding him out on the various candidates, and he remarked that Hoover had his hat in the ring. The leaders were amazed.

"He can't possibly be serious about it," one of them said.

"Well, believe it or not, it's true," Landon replied. "He is not only serious but he thinks he has a very good chance to get the nomination. He's after delegates and quietly is doing a lot of campaigning."

Note—At an Armistice day gathering in Topeka, Kas., Landon introduced Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri, leading Democratic isolationist, as one of the most constructive and courageous members of congress. Landon and Clark were on opposite sides in the neutrality fight, but Landon feels Clark displayed high courage in sticking by his views when he knew it would hurt his presidential chances.

Political Go-Round.

SENATOR Burt Wheeler is certainly trying hard to woo Townsend backing for his presidential ambitions. Latest issue of the Townsend Weekly carried a three-column picture of Wheeler conferring at Townsend headquarters on "old-age pension plans on Capitol Hill for the coming year." . . . Senator Arthur Vandenberg has written friends in Nebraska asking for suggestions for a state manager for his presidential campaign.

Thanksgiving Spirit

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

IT WAS the day before Thanksgiving. I took the train for my home, a distance of 200 miles. The morning was crisp and cold and a murky eastern sky gave hint of snow to come.

Only four empty seats were left in the rear of the center coach. Suitcases and bundles were piled on the racks above each seat, so that the aisles were clear. I took the second seat on the right and settled down for a pleasant ride. The countryside was drab. Some scrub oaks in lowlands still had their leaves that shivered in the northeast wind. Chickens hunted the wind-free side of houses and sheds, and scattered there upon the lawns I saw flocks of ducks and turkeys in many barnyards. I could forestall their fate.

An elderly couple got on at the next station. The old woman wore a dark, old fashioned hood and a breakfast shawl with a tapered point, at back and front. She was stooped and walked with effort. Her face, as she turned my way, was beautiful—netted and wreathed with wrinkles. I felt a nearness to her that surprised me. Her husband carried a large, deep basket from which protruded the legs and feet of a turkey ready for cooking.

A young, well-dressed man and woman followed in, and took the last short seat at the rear of the car. They seemed happy and expectant, too. The tall, rotund conductor entered the coach and began to take the fares. The old people did not notice him until he was almost beside them. Then she said, "John, the tickets—" and he began to search his pockets growing more and more excited. But he could not find them. She almost cried as he frantically turned his pockets inside out.

Then came a bit of lovely drama. The young man back of them when they did not notice, let his two tickets fall down on the seat between them. "Here they are!" she cried, in a quivering tone of relief, and handed them to John. The conductor punched them and placed a pink slip in the old man's hat.

"Why didn't you buy your tickets at the station?" the conductor demanded of the young man. "I haven't time for this on a crowded train." The young man paid and said nothing.

When he had helped the old man and woman down the steps with their weighty basket, he returned to his companion with a smile of satisfaction. "Are they friends of yours?" I asked him.

"No—I never saw them before, but weren't they cards? They reminded me of my own folks, somehow."

GALION PUPILS ELECT OFFICERS FOR 3 CLASSES

Election Follows Hot Drive for Votes; 49 Candidates Balloted Upon.

GALION—Following a heated campaign, conducted by some 49 candidates, officers of the three classes of Galion high school were elected Tuesday afternoon.

Conducted on a scale similar to municipal elections, but with somewhat more zest than the recent city election, the students ran candidates on three tickets. There were the Independents, the Shop party, and the Scholastics.

Dale Sanderlin holds the distinction of leading the class of 1940 for the fourth consecutive year, and was the only Independent candidate elected in the senior class. By political maneuvering, the support of the Shop ticket was thrown behind Sanderlin who in turn backed the Shop candidates.

Senior class officers are: president, Dale Sanderlin; vice president, Robert Shupp; secretary, Melvin Eichler; treasurer, Alvin Wenninger.

Junior officers: president, Richard Carmel; vice president, James Gilson; secretary, Junior Schreck; treasurer, Eugene Crim. Sophomore class: Sanford Felder, Marjorie Eaton, Annabelle Chapman and Melvin Harding, serving the four offices, respectively.

Rev. Michael McFadden, pastor of the church, read the single ring ceremony before members of the immediate families and friends. Nuptial music for the service was sung by the church choir.

The bride was attended by her sister, the maid of honor, Miss Mary Yetzer, and her cousin, the bridesmaid, Miss Mary Faust, both of Shelby. The best man was Vincent Wourm of New Washington. The bride's brothers, Louis and Howard Yetzer, both of Shelby, were the ushers.

WAR'S POPULAR THEME IN LIST OF NEW BOOKS

Library Adds Number of Non-Fiction Volumes on Day's Disturbing Problem.

Because the most disturbing problem of the times is war, the subject is constantly the theme of new volumes, and a number of them are included in this week's new non-fiction at the Public library.

"WAR IN OUR TIME," edited by Hans Speier and Alfred Kahler contains essays by the graduate faculty of the New School for Social Research, which analyze and describe the social implications of war and preparation for war. They disclose the increasing penetration and control of our individual and collective life by modern war.

"MEN IN BATTLE" by Alvah Bessie tells the story of Americans in Spain during the recent civil war.

"GIBRALTAR AND THE MEDITERRANEAN" by G. T. Garratt provides a history of Gibraltar and its part in past crises as well as a British view of the possible future of 'The Rock.'

H. G. Wells "THE FATE OF MAN" is an unemotional statement of the things that are happening to mankind now, and of the immediate possibilities confronting it.

Mary Ellen Chase's "A GOODLY FELLOWSHIP" is the story of her own life as a teacher, beginning in a rural school on the coast of Maine and concluding in Smith college.

Other Non-Fiction.

SACRAMENTO: RIVER OF GOLD (RIVERS OF AMERICA SERIES) by Dana.

A SEA ISLAND LADY by Francis Griswold is the story of a New England girl, Emily Fenwick, who went South at the end of the Civil war, as the very young wife of a carpet-bagger. Mainly the story is laid in the town of Beaufort, South Carolina, and the sea islands nearby, the time extending through six tumultuous decades of war, reconstruction, revival, and finally the transition to modern times.

THE WITCH IN THE WOOD by T. H. White continues the Arthurian legend begun in "The Sword in the Stone". The action of the novel shuttles back and forth between Merlyn and Arthur at Carlion and the Battle of Bedegraine, with the author's hilarious mixture of early English and 20th century details of living.

HUDSON REJOINS THE HERD by Claude Houghton is the record of Stephen Hudson's return to life in a London nursing home after he had been shot by a famous financier, while in the flat of a notorious actress. With return to consciousness his memory recreates the pattern of his past life.

Other fiction:

MASQUERADE by Brun.

CAPTAIN ABBY AND CAPTAIN JOHN by Coffin.

ADRIANA by Dyer.

FOOTPRINTS ON THE CEILING by Rawson.

A gift of the Library Committee of the Women of the Moose is the Pulitzer Prize edition of THE YEARLING by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings with 14 full-color illustrations by N. C. Wyeth.

How to Carve Your 'Royal Bird'

Insert fork firmly astride breastbone just right of high point; sever leg nearest by cutting through skin between body and thigh, bend leg back, cut through meat to joint and separate leg from body with tip of knife. Separate thigh from drumstick at joint. Next remove wing by cutting down side of bird to joint, separating parts at joint. Beginning at tip of breast-bone and slanting knife along wing joint, remove thin slices of breast meat. If entire bird is to be served, turn over and do same on other side.

HERE'S REASON YOU'RE GRINGO

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — (INS) — Why Mexicans call Americans "gringos" was explained recently by Capt. John B. Reybold, commander of the Second Dragoons of the Second cavalry.

"When the Second Cavalry fought in the Mexican war of 1846," he related, "the men rode into Mexico singing an old Irish drinking song, 'Green Grow the Rushes.'

The Mexicans heard that song so frequently that they called the cavalrymen 'gringos5 which was the way the opening words sounded to them."

were lost in the sinking of the destroyer. Twenty-one officers and men were injured.

Use Magnetic Mines.

Latest victims of the sea warfare followed retaliatory action by Britain in announcing Allied plans to seize German exports and German-owned cargoes on the high seas, and the condemnation of Germany's use of magnetic mines as "the latest abomination of German savagery" by chancellor of the exchequer, Sir John Simon.

Simon said that the British were meeting Germany's latest challenge and "all that science and skill can devise is devoted to meeting the new danger."

In Sight of Coast.

The Gipsy went down in the North sea in the region that has become a graveyard for British and neutral shipping, mainly because of mine explosions. The vessel, one of the most modern in the Royal navy, settled to the bottom in shallow water within sight of the coast.

On Way to Belgium.

The latest victim of the mine warfare was the Greek steamer Elena R. of 4,576 tons. The vessel was en route to Antwerp, Belgium, from the Argentine port of River Plate, with a cargo of grain.

Three members of the crew of the Elena R. were injured so seriously that they required hospital treatment. The woman survivor was the wife of the chief engineer.

GALION GIRL BECOMES BRIDE OF CRESTLINE YOUTH TODAY

GALION — Another Thanksgiving Day wedding solemnized at St. Patrick's Catholic parsonage at 9 30 a. m. united Isabella Agnes Schnegelsberger daughter of Mr and Mrs. George Schneglesberger of Charles street, Galion, and William Garrett, son of Mrs William Garrett of Crestline. grim fathers came to the new and unknown world they brought with them a simplicity of living, courage, bravery and a devotion to their ideals.

"They brought us a priceless heritage," he said, "in four phases. First, a staunch belief in Almighty God; second, they brought with them the written word of God; third, they brought into the new land the observance of the Sabbath; and fourth, they brought the spirit of freedom and the capacity for a democratic form of government. Let us have thanks living as well as thanksgiving."

Rev. Herman L. Gilbert of St. Paul Lutheran church, who preached to his own congregation and St. Luke's at the latter church, took as his text the verses of the Psalm: "Bless Thee Lord, Oh My Soul, and all that is within me, Bless His holy name. Bless the Lord, oh my soul, and forget not all His benefits."

Taken For Granted Today.

On the first Thanksgiving day in America, he pointed out, the Pilgrims were grateful for abundant harvests and for the food for their stomachs, because they had known hunger and had faced starvation, but today we take good and bountiful food for granted.

"A Christian is truly thankful," he said "and because he is thankful he will desire to give full expression of 'all that is within me' and will express his gratitude by his devotion to his home, his community and his church. The desire to express his thanks will make him strive for peace and good will and for an economic distribution that will alleviate human suffering"

Rev. Grover E Swoyer, pastor of First Lutheran church, drove back to Mansfield early this morning from Columbus where, as chaplain of the 134th Field Artillery of the National Guard, he was attending military maneuvers, addressed members of his own congregation. He dwelt on the Providential care that has been given to America, and urged his people on this Thanksgiving day to give proportionately to God as He has given to them.

Nation Divided.

The nation was pretty evenly divided today in its celebration of the new Thanksgiving day. When President Roosevelt acceded to the persuasion of certain retail business groups early this fall to change the date which has been the last Thursday in November since the administration of Abraham Lincoln, states and cities found themselves in disagreement.

So that today there are cities and communities observing the day in states that have designated next Thursday as Thanksgiving, while in the states that did follow the president's wishes, there are cities that rebelled and will eat their turkey on Nov. 30.

Atlantic City's mayor solved the problem by declaring both days a holiday. "Today shall be celebrated as 'Franksgiving' while next Thursday will be Thanksgiving here," he proclaimed.

All of the states in the New England group, where the first Thanksgiving day in America was established 316 years ago, turned their backs on the new date and today was just another Thursday. Next Thursday they'll close their places of business, their schools and public places and eat turkey and cranberries.

Residents in Kentucky towns along the Ohio river were "victims" of the confusion. Ohio is celebrating today and business is suspended; Kentucky celebrates next week, so that Kentuckians working in Ohio towns have the day off but no celebration, and next week when their state has a holiday, they'll have to work.

The president and Mrs. Roosevelt, undaunted by the confusion over the two dates, were at Warm Springs, Ga., today where the president will carve turkey at the Infantile Paralysis Foundation. Of the 350 patients at the institution seven were chosen by lot to sit at the table with the president and Mrs. Roosevelt.

SURVEY SHOWS LABOR SHORTAGE STARTING HERE, COLUMNIST SAYS

A survey of industrial conditions in the Mansfield-Shelby area reveals "the beginnings of a mild labor shortage," John W. Love, business analyst for the Cleveland Press, said today in his column.

Love, who made a trip to Mansfield and Shelby this week to look over the economic situation, bases his prediction on unemployment figures which he obtained from C. W. Handley, manager of the Bureau of Unemployment compensation here.

"Though 1,600 are registered as unemployed in Richland and Morrow counties, an employer's request for 150 unskilled workers a week or so ago could not be filled from the list," he states.

"No fooling, I know of no diversified industrial area which is busier than this one. There's a true recovery hereabouts with most of the economic cranberries. And it seems likely to last a spell."

Love says he visited the Ohio Seamless Tube plant at Shelby and saw that the company was doubling its annealing furnaces. He says the plant is probably turning out as much tonnage as at any time in its history.

Westinghouse has 3,600 employes on the payroll here and that the plant will "considerably increase" its roster around the first of the year, Love writes.

He points out that Mansfield is a large purveyor to the mail order houses because of the diversified wares turned out by industry here.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dowdy, tired and peevish.

Low blood count means you haven't enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:

FABIENNE SEYMOUR, rich, young and beautiful.

NICKY BARTLETT, wealthy and in love with Fabienne.

YESTERDAY: Fabienne persuades Nicky to drive her to Willoughby house, the old Willoughby mansion which her grandfather has left as a settlement house.

CHAPTER THREE

Marcus brought Fabienne's tray in and laid it across her knees. Annabelle slipped a cape of pale blue elderdown across her shoulders. Her mother's maid, in maroon taffeta that was twin to Annabelle's, passed the door with clothes draped over her arm.

Fabienne stretched deliciously and said, "Somebody going some place?"

"Madame is having her trunks packed, Miss Fabienne," the butler told her and removed the silver tops of the breakfast dishes.

Fabienne inspected the dishes hungrily. There were rosy melon balls in ice, an egg with a fragrant brown sauce still sizzling in a minute baking dish, tiny sweet rolls toasted, and a pot of coffee.

There were also the morning newspapers and two piles of mail.

Marcus poured coffee and went out with the dish covers.

Fabienne settled back in her pillows and opened her mail. She gobbled the melon balls while she read the bills. Then she turned to the invitations, the little notes with foreign port-marks while she ate the rest of her breakfast.

There wasn't a crumb left when she finished.

Sheer curtains, like lingerie petticoats, billowed lazily in the sunny, September breeze that blew in her windows. In the room beyond she could hear Annabelle's movements as she prepared her bath.

Oh, what a lovely morning she thought. For what? For golf? For shopping? She ran through her mail. Helen Carrington wanted her to serve on a committee for some sort of refugee work. Heavens, no!

Gertrude came to her door. "I've decided to sail on the Normandie, Fab. The Derwents are going to take the apartment. Are you coming with me? I do think you ought to stay here. Edna and Mark would like to have you, but of course—"

"I'll let you know later, mother. You really mean that you think I ought to stay here until Nicky proposes again, don't you?"

Nicky! She'd forgotten that she'd told Nicky to call for her at eleven. What for? Oh, yes, she was going to make him drive her down to the slums. To Henderson street to see Willoughby house.

She regretted that impulse. To waste a beautiful morning drive down through the slums to appease an anger she had completely forgotten was silly.

Her mother's exasperated voice recalled her:

"Fabienne Seymour, you've got a disposition just like your . . . your father. What are you going to do today?"

Fabienne grinned. She looked strangely like the old man then, old Elihu. "Nicky and I are going down to look over the family mansion."

"Oh, Fab!"

"Don't worry. I won't do anything but look it over."

"What is there to see?"

That was what Nicky wanted to know, too. Privately, Fabienne agreed with both of them that the expedition was a stupid one. There were so many more pleasant things to do on a bright September morning. But perversity was a strong trait in Miss Seymour and she was persistent about driving down to Henderson street.

"What is it anyway?" Nicky plagued her.

"It's a settlement house, darling. A place where children and . . . oh, I don't know any more than you. Only it is some kind of a neighborhood club where earnest young women teach people things they don't want to know. Grandfather Willoughby met some angel of mercy—some completely impossible Good Woman—named Ellen Chapman—who is supposed to be a miracle worker in the cause of charity. And she sold him on the idea of lending the house to make the Henderson Street Settlement house. Then, as you know, he left the whole works to them as a memorial to his mother."

Nicky chortled. "She must have been some persuader. I thought the old man loved that place."

Fabienne said. "Humph!" She settled down glumly.

"Ever see her?"

"Who? Chapman? No. But can't you see her? Nice broad bosom and a lamp in her eyes. A spinster of fifty mothering all the dear unwashed."

Nicky turned the car off Seventh avenue and drove through a maze of crooked crowded streets. In an astonishingly short time they had left the neighborhood of neat apartments and now they drove more slowly through knots of screaming urchins who scampered through the streets. Bed clothing hung from the windows of the tenements that lined the narrow streets and pushcarts forced them to progress at a snail's pace.

"Want to turn back?" Nicky asked when they had narrowly avoided running over a baby carriage pushed into their path.

"When I slum, I slum. Push on," Fabienne answered, wrinkling her nose with distaste for the smells that assaulted it. "After all, this is where he built his great mansion for his mother sixty years ago."

It was before them then. A mass of gray stone, with neat curtains in every window. There were patches of green grass between the iron paling of the fence and the building at the front. Back of it, they could see a playground. The sound of singing children's voices came from one of the opened upstairs windows.

Over the fan-door that was open there was a new plate. On it, WILLOUGHBY HOUSE was written in black on a field of gold.

It was very clean and cool and spacious, that house sitting there in the midst of a city's squalor.

"Well, there it is. Now do we drive on?"

Fabienne was looking at the house. "No, not yet. I think I'll look around." She got out. "It might be amusing. But you stay here."

Out of the open doorway, a slim, dark girl dressed in navy blue, was leading a file of children almost as tall as herself.

Fabienne walked to the foot of the flight of steps and looked upwards and in.

"Wouldn't you like to go in?"

It was the dark girl who asked her.

"I don't think so. I was just looking around." She looked up at the black-and-gold sign above her.

"We put it up this morning." It was the girl speaking again.

"Did you?" Fabienne said distantly, aware of her stiffness, unable to think of anything elst to say.

"And inside we have another, one to which we are all devoted. It's in memory of your great-great grandmother, who made all this possible, Miss Seymour."

"You seem to know me?" Fabienne said, turning a glance of surprise on her guide.

The other girl smiled and nodded. "I recogniztd you from your photographs. Won't you come inside and let me show you?" Not waiting for Fabienne to say she would, the girl dismissed the children and went to the door.

Fabienne did not want to go on. She didn't know how not to. She said, "Thank you . . . but perhaps . . . some other day."

Nicky was watching the little play from back of the wheel a few feet away.

Fabienne looked at him, hoping he'd catch her cue and call to her to hurry, but Nicky was grinning. Nicky was tremendously amused! For some strange reason, she felt piqued.

She turned to the other girl with a broad smile. "All right," she said. "Let's go. This might have been my house, you know. I'd like to see it. I never have, Mis—"

"I'm glad to have the privilege of showing it to you. May I introduce myself? My name is Ellen Chapman." She held out a small hand that was surprisingly firm and strong for such a slip of a girl.

GUIDE TORPEDO BY TELEVISION

Flying Missiles to Be Sent From Airplane, Directed By Pilot.

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO — Flying torpedoes, big enough to sink battleships and controlled by television!

This is no dream, according to U. A. Sanabria, chief of staff of the American Television institute in Chicago. He declared that specifications have been submitted to the war department, adding:

"The control engineer sees the image of the countryside and, of course, the target exactly as if he were riding in the topedo."

In design, the torpedo is a small stream-lined, radio-controlled airplane, the scientist explained.

"Such a torpedo has been successfully demonstrated," he said. "However, in its present form there has been one great disadvantage. The master plane and pilot must remain in close contact and so in danger.

"In our television torpedo, however, we mount an iconoscope of similar television tube, equipped with a large focusing lens which constitutes the nose of the plane.

Now we can transmit the image from the torpedo to a screen in the cabin of the master plane several miles away."

GET NEW GUN

U. S. Soldiers Equipped With Semi-Automatic Rifles.

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— The new semi-automatic Garand rifle is rapidly taking the place of the old Springfield in the U. S. army, it was revealed here by Brig. Gen. Earl McFarland, assistant to the Army's chief of ordnance.

First weapon of its kind to be adopted by a major army in the world, Garands are being manufactured at the rate of 100 per day at a private plant and it is hoped to soon step up production to 200 daily, he declared.

"This gun has a high rate of fire, with less fatigue for the man using it, and it is vastly superior against low-flying airplanes," Gen. McFarland added.

The semi-automatic rifle, named after its inventor, John C. Garand, Springfield, Mass., will fire approximately 50 shots a minute, as compared with the 1903 Springfield rifles used in the World war which average between 20 and 30 bullets a minute.

VISITOR STILL PRIZES SOUVENIR OF CITY'S CELEBRATION IN 1887

A 52-year-old souvenir of the "largest and best celebration ever held in Mansfield" is in the possession of Mrs. Milton Sheets, Gibsonburg, former Mansfield resident who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Harding, 311 West Third street.

The souvenir is a four by six inch miniature of The Mansfield Daily News, published on July 4, 1887. On the face of it is the national flag in colors, and the inscription:

"The News is presented to the public today in miniature form in honor of the day we celebrate and also as a souvenir of the occasion. The News has prospered with the prosperity of the city, and today congratulates the citizens of Mansfield upon the material advances in its business interests, the growth of the city, and especially upon the improvements now in progress which the celebration of this day fitly commemorates."

On the tiny editorial page are the names of the editors: "W. S. Cappeller, E. S. Hiestand, editors, N. M. Mix, city editor." There also is a bold challenge to any other paper in the city to produce its circulation figures and guarantees its advertisers that "the circulation of the News is thrice that of any other publication in the city."

It asks the citizens to "blot out all of the intervening years and compare Mansfield today with Mansfield 50 years ago (1837) and your astonishment will be as great as that of Rip Van Winkle."

Under the column entitled 'The City in Brief" (a feature still carried in today's News-Journal) are such reminders as "Don't miss the display of fireworks tonight and don't take on an over dose of firewater" . . . "One of the features of the program is a band concert in Central park tonight" . . . "On the Fourth of July everyone has a constitutional right to paint 'er red, but not too crimson" . . . "The polo game this afternoon on horseback promises an abundance of fun" (polo games 52 years ago, Imagine!)

The effort of the Confederate states to regain their lost battle flags which were in the possession of the North is recalled by a statement of Gov. James B. Foraker in the miniature sheet: "No rebel flags will be surrendered while I am governor."

The day's program included rope walking by a Prof. Leon and "grand industrial parade."

Mrs Sheets is a charter member of the Mansfield Round Table club.

SCIENTIST, NOT 'DICK,' NEMESIS OF U. S. CROOKS

Criminals Fear Laboratory Man More Than 'Gumshoe' Shown In Detective Stories.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The white-coated scientist has placed Sherlock Holmes, Philo Vance and all the other super-sleuths of history completely in the shade.

The criminal's nemesis no longer is a spectral figure in great-coat and fore-and-aft hat, armed only with a curved-stem pipe and an outsize magnifying glass.

It is the unspectacular laboratician in the federal bureau of investigation, who coldly and calmly pursues investigations which inexorably grind out evidence resulting in impartial administration of justice.

Perhaps, it's only a piece of string, a lock of hair, or the impression of a tire left in the mud of a lonely country road when it comes to the F. B. I.'s laboratory, but when it leaves, it's usually the key evidence that determines guilt or innocence of some accused person.

In September, 1939, more than seven hundred—722 to be exact—examinations were made in the F. B. I. laboratory. All manner of objects were studied—3,799 specimens in all—ranging from documents to bullets fired from murder guns.

Playing parts in this ultra-modern method of crook-catching were all the tricks of science—microanalysis, toxicology, biochemistry, ballistics, metallurgy, spectography.

Footprints were studied and compared: bombs and explosives were analyzed; practically every known type of ammunition came under scrutiny.

In almost every case, the white-clad detective got results. An ordinary watermark in a sheet of stationery—only a watermark to the average glance—provided the clue to an extortionist. A piece of rope led to the doorstep of a robber.

On Sept. 30, the F. B. I. laboratory—built up into a major force in crime detection by Director J. Edgar Hoover—contained, for reference purposes, 2,584 types of rope, cordage and twine. Other items included 3,461 different tire tread prints and 36,695 watermarks.

LODGING PLAN WORKS

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—John Grodowski, 75, explained to Magistrate Frank Giorgio that he rang the fire alarm so he could get put in jail for the winter. He said he had no relatives, no home and no means of support. Magistrate Giorgio gave him a six-months term in the Home for the Aged.

HOARDING ENDS

British Threats Are Effective, Drivers 'Shell Out.'

LONDON —(INS)— Recent heavy punishment of gasoline hoarders in Britain has caused many automobile owners to return their hidden stores to filling stations.

Hundreds of gallons of gas are being taken to the stations. To the amazement of gas station owners many motorists are refusing to take payment for the fuel returned.

One man returned 150 gallons refusing to accept any cash in exchange. Another rolled up to the filling station, his large car weighed down with several five-gallon drums. He also refused to accept payment.

PIN'S OLDEST

Called Earliest Gadget Ever Made By Mankind.

Probably the oldest gadget known to man is the common pin, used to fasten things together.

Way back in the Stone Age, according to a bulletin published at Rockefeller Center, pins made of bone were used by the cave men of Europe. In Roman times a thorn cut from a bush was used as a common pin and it was not until 1812 that pins were first made in America.

These early American pins, which cost one dollar for a paper, were made in two pieces—a straight pointed shank and a head composed of a separate piece of wire wound around the shank and generally soldered to it.

The bulletin said the phrase "pin money" originated when English women began saving small sums of money with which to buy ordinary common pins.

PUTS MONEY IN FRIEND'S VEST

NEW YORK—(INS)—Ninety dollars, missing a year, popped up recently neatly tucked in the vest pocket belonging to the loser's friend. Raymond Harvey, loser of the money, went ice skating last fall in Madison Square Garden with his friend Kenneth Mygatt.

Harvey, getting ready to take a shower, tucked nine $10 bills into a vest in the locker he shared with Mygatt. The money turned up when Mygatt sent a suit he had stored away for a year to the cleaners.

Nazi Generals Predict Stalemate On Western Front

DECLARES BOTH DEFENSES ARE IMPREGNABLE

Strength of Siegfried and Maginot Lines Makes Attack Chances Useless.

BY PIERRE J. HUSS
(INS Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN—"War on the Western front alone would have to die out by force of circumstances, for neither an attack on the Maginot Line nor on the Siegfried Line can have any success. It's a stalemate."

High German military opinion made this statement to me during my six-day visit to all points of the Westwall, as Germans like to call the Siegfried Line. They point out that the Siegfried Line is "humanly impossible" to conquer and admit that the Maginot Line itself is no less impregnable although less elastic.

"A French general sometime ago remarked that, given 900,000 men, he could break through," the same source stated. "He is probably correct to the point where he would advance his troops beyond the first scattered defense line and drive them into the cross-fire of the keypoints.

"He would not succeed in opening the gate because beyond the first real defense line lies as many as four, five and six subsidiary lines so that the greatest combination of oncoming armies would by nature bleed themselves to death. As for the 900,000 men, I should say that those able to escape could be counted without an adding machine."

Personal observation indicated only too clearly that much of the Siegfried Line's strength does lie in the everlasting continuation of its defense positions, which take advantage in varied and multiple form of every vantage point of ground in all military regions from the Belgian border clear past Luxembourg along the French border to Basle.

The Siegfried Line, contrary to the Maginot Line, is a system of dotted points on a German military map stretching without interruption along every foot of the border whereas the Maginot Line is a piecemeal fortified front along only part of the Franco-German frontier and is more like a straight line of rather narrow depth.

Hitler Explains Difference.

Hitler himself is said to have expounded the principle of the Siegfried Line as against that of the Maginot by drawing a large round circle the size of a soup plate on a piece of paper and along side this circle the size of a dime.

"Which of these two circles forms the easier target?" he is reported as having argued. "Obviously the soup plate. Well, then, the Maginot Line consists of so many major underground fortified positions identified by a number of these soup plate circles. Against them I propose to build thousands upon thousands of little dots which no amount of massed artillery can destroy or even hit except for a chance shot here and there. That is the essential constructional difference between the Maginot and Siegfried Lines."

Court Appoints New Constable In Madison Township

Charles R. Bailey, 57, of 179½ North Main street, former city patrolman, was named constable of Madison township yesterday by Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch.

The appointment becomes effective when Bailey posts bond, the amount of which is to be determined by the Madison township trustees.

Judge Kalbfleisch said the appointment of a constable had been made at the request of several property owners in the township in the vicinity of Sunset park, north of Mansfield. The position pays no salary.

The petition presented to the court, Judge Kalbfleisch said sought the protection of property owned by the state at the park site and asserted property had been damaged and carried away recently.

Bailey resigned from the police department in 1921 after serving six years as a patrolman.

VERSATILE DOG

Coon Hound, On First Test, 'Trees' 14-Inch Bass in Creek.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind.—(AP)—On its first test, Clyde Slavens' new 'coon dog showed its versatility.

The dog, stopping beside a creek, began to bark. Slavens looked.

There in shallow water floundered a 14-inch bass.

"This dog," Slavens told friends, "is one of the most promising I ever had."

Battle Seen Over Foreign Trade Program

Up and Down THE STREET

Several members of the 1934 mid-term graduating class at Senior high school took exception to the claim that the January class will be the largest in the school's history. The 1934 class had 137 students, they pointed out, which was 11 more than the 1940 class will have. The honor of being the biggest class was given to the 1940 group after school officials checked figures covering recent years. It was revealed today, however, that the figures went back only to 1934, the year that really had the record class.

Residents out Cline avenue way are wondering how they can catch some of the pheasant running at large in their neighborhood and still stay within the law. The birds may not know it—then again they may—but it's against the law to hunt inside the city limits, hence they're safe. That is, they are unless Cline avenue residents can develop into a Jesse Owens—or even faster.

Wiliam J. Locke, Mansfield's Republican mayor-elect, went vacationing with Democratic John Pierce over in the Pennsylvania woods and so far as the town of Brookville, Pa., is concerned Mansfield elected a Democratic mayor. It seems that friends here were sent a clipping of the Brookville paper which contained an item to the effect that Locke and Pierce were visitors near Brookville. The item concluded with "Mr Pierce was recently elected mayor of Mansfield."

The Thanksgiving day dinner today at the home of William N. Fenn, former Mansfield councilman, will be graced by a turkey, the gift of P. H. Ober, Mansfield Tire and Rubber company official. Prior to the weekly plant bowling league matches, Ober offered a turkey to the bowler who obtained the highest total. So "Bill" went out and shot a 597 to acquire the turkey as well as a new nickname from fellow workers, "Turkey Bill."

ONE-MAN ARMY

Ulster May Revive Regiment With Single Member.

BELFAST, Ireland—(AP)—Ulster's recently disbanded one man regiment may be remobilized under Britain's rearmament program.

The "North Irish Horse" rank and file were disbanded after the World war.

Its officers retired one by one, until Sir Ronald Ross, British member of parliament for Londonderry, was its only active member. He retired a few years back.

Now with the regiment's revival likely, he may redon his uniform as honorary major.

The exercises will be held in the auditorium at 8 p. m. Open house for the public will be held on the same night.

Here Are Miller's 15 Reasons 'Why We Should Be Thankful'

Fifteen reasons "why we should be thankful" today were listed by W. L. Miller, superintendent of Mansfield schools, in letters mailed yesterday to 260 principals, teachers, and school employes in the city.

Believing that the superintendent's reasons for celebrating Thanksgiving this year are of interest to everyone, The News-Journal reprints his letter below. It follows:

WE SHOULD BE THANKFUL

Because the nation's granaries are filled to overflowing with harvested crops, while "the cattle on a thousand hills" are sleek and fat;

Because the low hanging clouds of depression, which have shadowed the country for the past seven or eight years, are now beginning to lift;

Because unemployment is lessening, due to improved business conditions;

Because during the year we have been spared any major disasters on sea, land or in the air;

Because in our United States the ideal of true democracy flourishes as nowhere else in the world;

Because our churches are untouched by the hand of the state and we are at complete liberty to worship where, when and as we please;

Because we still remain a free people possessing the unchallenged right of selecting our leaders by an unintimidated ballot;

Because as a nation, we still are able to discern the difference between Right and Might, and as free men, cling to one and spurn the other;

Because even with the Depression, we have enjoyed a higher standard of living, than those of any other country;

Because we have the longest unarmed border in the world and our coasts are free of a foeman's threat;

Because our schools are untrammeled by the enforced teaching of any ism or political ideology;

Because we still preserve that reverence for Womanhood which our fathers cherished;

Because as a people, we are free of racial hatreds and prejudices;

Because we enjoy an equality of opportunity unknown elsewhere in the world;

Because we are AMERICANS!

Weiss said reports were circulated yesterday that the man who lives near Loudonville, had died as a result of hammer blows Saturday night.

CAPPER CALLS PACTS 'UNFAIR' TO AGRICULTURE

Joins Opposition to Reciprocity Agreements; Power to Make Them Expires in June.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Senator Capper (R.-Kans.) joined some of his Republican and Democratic colleagues today in predicting a "real battle" next session over the extension of the administration's reciprocal trade program.

He contended farm groups were opposed to the trade agreements on the ground that they had favored industry at the expense of agriculture.

Capper upheld the United Mine Workers (CIO) and the National Coal association in apposition to a trade agreement cutting the excise tax on crude and fuel oil from Venezuela. He added that he thought the whole reciprocal tariff policy was "very unfair."

The authority to negotiate the agreements expires next June. Some members of both major parties have announced they would seek to terminate the program entirely or to obtain for congress a veto power over pacts negotiated by the state department.

Talks Proceeding.

Meanwhile, it was said authoritatively that trade talks between the United States and Argentina were progressing smoothly despite issuance of a circular by the exchange control office in Buenos Aires saying it was necessary that the country's imports "shall continue to be supplied from their normal sources, avoiding unnecessary deviations to other sources or countries."

Although the circular was interpreted in some quarters as meaning that Argentina did not wish to divert her purchases from Europe to the United States, persons in close touch with Argentine-American relations said that a reciprocal trade agreement could be worked out.

Argentina's trade with Great Britain and France has been hampered by the European war, authorities said, and dealings with Germany virtually have stopped. This condition already has brought a sharp upturn in Argentine trade with the United States

Thumbnail Court Record Of Man Who Plays Leading Role In Threatened Strike

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Westbrook Pegler interrupts his series on Kansas City with the following column which is particularly timely because of the projected strike in Hollywood against movie producers.

CHICAGO—Willie Bioff, the labor dictator of the entire amusement industry of the United States and Canada, and sole arbiter, on the union side, of problems affecting the 35,000 men and women of the mechanical crafts of Hollywood, was convicted of pandering in a Chicago municipal court in February, 1922.

He was sentenced to serve six months in jail and fined $300 and costs. Bioff was committed to the Bridewell on Feb. 24, and was released on March 20 on an appeal to the appellate court.

The appellate court, in the October term of 1922, affirmed the verdict and sentence, and a mandate was issued to the sheriff on March 2, 1923, to return him to jail.

On March 23, the appellate court recalled this mandate because a motion had been made to permit Bioff to appeal to the state supreme court. The documents on file in the appellate court ordinarily would contain a record of the completion of such a further appeal, but there is no trace of any such action in the clerk's office.

Inquiry at the office of the clerk of the state supreme court at Springfield brings the reply that there is no record there of an appeal to that body.

The court record stops at the appellate court's affirmation of the conviction and sentence. The Bridewell records, nevertheless, fail to show that Bioff ever was returned there to finish his sentence.

The arresting officers in the raid on the house of prostitution, of which Bioff, by his own admission, was an employe, and, in the contention of the state, one of the three proprietors, were the late William Shoemaker, then a lieutenant, later chief of detectives of the Chicago police department, and Policeman Arthur Wachholz.

Both policemen gave testimony, and Wachholz signed the official information which was the basis of the prosecution. In this document, Wachholz said he raided a saloon on South Halsted street, on the West Side, on Jan. 14, 1922. It alleged that Bioff on that day received from Bernice Thomas, alias Rose, the sum of $29, earned by prostitution, waived a jury and entered a plea of not guilty.

On the stand, Wachholz said that the place was operated by Bioff and two others.

John Young, an elevator operator by trade, testified that he was employed as the manager of the brothel. He said he had charge of the cash and the books.

Young said that when he was hired, at $2 a day, Bioff instructed him in his work. He said that, in the performance of these duties, he would obtain money from each woman.

"Then I would turn the money over to Bioff," he testified.

Although Bioff contended that he was only a bartender, his counsel, on the unsuccessful appeal, admitted that it had been shown that he received the money from Young. It was contended, however, that it had not been shown that Bioff received anything from the prostitute. As another defense in the appeal, it was urged that, if a prosecution could be brought against Bioff, it must be conducted under the state law against the operation of a house of prostitution rather than under the law against pandering.

The opinion of the appellate court affirmed the verdict, and sentence was signed by Justice McSurley, presiding, and concurred in by Justices Dever and Matchett.

A suggestion was made that the Willie Bioff who controls the projection operators of 15,000 American movie theaters, who speaks arbitrarily for the 35,000 Hollywood technicians, and, last summer, tried to "take over" all the state and screen actors and night club, radio and variety performers, might be another man of the same name.

Capt. Dan Golbert of the Chicago police force, attached to the district attorney's office, insisted, however, that he knew the Hollywood Bioff to be the Chicago panderer.

Lieut. Charles E. Egan of the same detail was more emphatic.

"I saw him in California myself," Lieut. Egan said, "and he is the same Bioff that we had in Chicago."

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—John Payne, the tall-dark-and-handsome Virginian, wants to "hit the jackpot and scram," so help him Hannah.

The scramming, as he explains it, will be only a partial black-out. Hollywood, as he has come to know it, is so full of a number of things he'd hate to shake the old dust off his feet permanently.

"I'd like to be able to scram the way Ronald Colman does," he clarifies his objective. "To make a couple of pictures when I wanted to, and call the rest of my time my own. To hide out when I felt like it, and never get caught in the town's killing pace."

The Payne platform—or formula for jackpot-hitting—is a philospohy of living. He tells about it, over bacon and eggs at the derby where the usual noontime Hollywood sideshow is going great guns.

"I like a place like this, with lots of people; sort of exciting, isn't it? I like Hollywood. I think it's a great town . . .

TO HIT the jackpot I believe a fellow has to start off with a sound sense of values, and learn to know what's phoney and what's true. He's got to keep his feet on the ground, and keep his ears open for advice. He'll get a lot of it, so he has to learn to weigh it carefully. He has to steer clear of the attitude that Hollywood is 100 per cent hoey—even though that may be 95 per cent true. He has to keep on the look-out for the other 5 per cent which is pure gold

"I want to guard my health—it's easy to lose in the picture business. A fellow can make a nervous wreck of himself if he isn't careful. He can worry and fume so much that he takes up the pace that kills—just for relief from nerves. Then he's not ready for the big chance when it comes—and it does come if he's patient enough, keeps on trying to learn. I'm in no hurry, and I'm learning all the time. So help me Hannah. I'm going to hit that jackpot some day."

John Payne has learned a lot since that night Sam Goldwyn invited him to Hollywood out of a New York show in which he was understudying the star. He learned during the year that Goldwyn kept him under contract—even though his only picture work was a bit in "Dodsworth"—and he learned some more during his term at Paramount, although here too he didn't face many cameras. He really got his training at Warner's—in pictures and in studio ways. After a big build-up as a star, he was "dropped" there when his contract called for a big salary jump—and then he was recalled, at twice his former pay, for another picture, "Timber."

"THAT'S all right with me too," says John (so-help-me-Hannah!) Payne. "I figure I can get along better without a contract—and have more fun on the pictures I want to make."

The eventual partial "scram" will be devoted, he says, to writing (of which he has sold a bit before turning theatrical) and to music. He wants to finish an operetta, for which he has written four songs already.

His favorite role (yet unwritten): John Howard Payne, his great-great-uncle, composer of "Home, Sweet Home."

His favorite actress: his wife, Anne Shirley. ("Maybe I'm prejudiced, but I think she's great!")

Thanksgiving Messages

EDITOR'S NOTE: Archbishop Joseph Schrembs, of the Cleveland Catholic diocese, and Bishop Beverely D. Tucker, Episcopal bishop of Ohio, have written the following Thanksgiving messages, dispatched through International News Service.

By ARCHBISHOP JOSEPH SCHREMBS

ON THIS THANKSGIVING we should be happy that we are free from the perils of war and still at peace. I hope that this Thanksgiving day will be a source of blessing to our own people and all the people of the world.

It is sad that the world should be engulfed by war spirit of hate and of war. Instead we should feel the spirit of prayer.

It is said that the world should be engulfed by war and hatreds. We should feel the spirit of prayer and all the world should join in Thanksgiving to God for our blessings.

Would be to God that the same blessings be extended to all nations of the world.

* * * * *

By BISHOP BEVERLEY D. TUCKER

THANKSGIVING is the one national religious festival of America. It is pre-eminently fitting that this year we should give thanks to Almighty God that America as a nation enjoys the blessing of outward peace, that we have been preserved during this year from the blight of war that has laid its heavy hand upon many nations of the earth.

The serious thought that should come to all Americans as we give thanks for this mercy is that such a blessing carries with it a corresponding obligation. "To whom much is given, of him shall much be required." If we are outwardly the most favored nation on the earth today, our recognition of that fact should make us also the most highly responsible nation on the face of the earth for its common welfare.

The spirit in which we can best observe Thanksgiving day this year is not that of thanking God that we are not as other men are. We have uncommon reason for rejoicing as a nation and giving thanks for out outward peace, but as has been well said, "We have also uncommon opportunity and obligation to give other peoples inward reason for thankfulness that they live on the same earth with us."

HELPS 400,000 FIND OHIO JOBS

Veteran Employment Service Woman Worker Completes 25 Years in Post.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — A woman who found 400,000 jobs for other people but never found one for herself has finished 25 years with the state employment service.

Miss Lydia Tinker began her work with the old state employment service as an assistant superintendent. Job finding services were something of a novelty then and the superintendent and she made up the service's entire personnel.

During the early days almost all of the applicants were domestics or day laborers, but in a few years placements in other fields were made.

World war days found Miss Tinker looking for farm laborers, which were at a premium, and also for men to fill special governmental departments.

Miss Tinker campaigned throughout the 1920's to "sell" employers on the idea of using the state's free service.

Th old service has since been made a part of the Ohio Bureau of unemployment Compensation and Miss Tinker's title has changed also. But she is doing the same kind of work as a senior interviewer. She has sent as many as 125 persons to work in one day.

"And it's just as big a thrill today as it was on that first day back in 1914 to have somebody come back with a glow in their face and say, "I got that job," Miss Tinker said.

ABSENCE OF RAIDS PUTS A. R. P. ARMY IN BRITAIN IN DISFAVOR

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Britains vast army of Air Raid Precaution workers is in disfavor with the public. Hitler is to blame for his failure to send bombing planes over England to give the A. R. P. army real work to perform.

When the A. R. P. was founded just over a year ago—at the time of the Munich crisis—the appeal for volunteers brought poor results. For a year the organization carried out its work with a skeleton staff.

With the outbreak of war, however, thousands of men and women rushed to join the A. R. P. on a full time basis—at $15 a week. Untrained, they were drafted into service as wardens, firemen, cops, stretcher bearers, demolition and decontamination crews, etc.

With the first 72 hours of service air raid warnings were sounded on three occasions. Under the guidance of fully trained men the A. R. P. services carried out their work splendidly. The public openly expressed their appreciation of the home defense army on those occasions.

But since Hitler has refrained from sending bombing planes over England the town councilors have had time to examine the heavy expenditures incurred by the establishment of the A. R. P. army and to suggest drastic reductions.

"A. R. P. members are getting paid for doing nothing," it is claimed. It has been suggested that the police or military should take over control of this civilian army, and that the members should receive the same pay as a British soldier—48 cents a day—plus $1 a week expenses.

Persons enlisted in the home services at the outbreak of war are now being fully trained, and persons unfit for the work are being weeded out. But still the public objects to this army being paid to carry out jobs that might never occur.

Sir John Anderson, chief of the A. R. P., is strongly defending his civilian army against the critics, but, strange as it seems, only Hitler can give the A. R. P. army a boost.

Two new animal biographies have been added to the library collection. The first is the dramatic story of a white coyote in the desert of the west. The second is the life of a black collie dog on the coast of the North Atlantic.

SONG DOG, by Vance Hoyt—Because he was a white coyote, Song Dog was always recognized by his man-friend, Bromley, and by his enemy, a neighbor rancher man. From the time of the slaughter of Song Dog's own brothers and sisters to the ruthless searching out of his mate and their puppies, the life of the coyote was a continuous struggle against enemies.

U. S. EXPORTERS FAVORABLE ON SEA BLOCKADE

Disclose Indications of Co-operating With Britain On 'Navicert System.'

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—American exporters are showing a disposition to go along with Great Britain's new move to tighten its blockade of Germany by reviving the "navicert system," effective Dec. 1.

Under the system, which was in operation during the World war, exporters from the United States would have to stipulate in advance of shipment exactly what was to be shipped in order to obtain from the British consulate a "navicert," or commercial passport.

The system will apply to all shipments to Belgium, Denmark, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Iceland, Finland, Latvia, and Estonia.

S. K. Brun, vice president of General Motors Overseas corporation, in commenting on the "navicert system," said that "anything making it possible for shipments to get through without delay would be a good thing."

Many American ships recently have been held up seven and eight days at the Downs, off Dover, at Weymouth, England, and at Kirkwall, Scotland, while their cargoes were closely inspected for contraband.

Neutral ships leaving United States ports face similar tedious searches unless they carry a "navicert." The "navicert" must be carried on the same ship as the goods to which it relates.

Brun, told International News Service that he believes American exporters must recognize that a war exists and that the British are going to do everything possible to see that goods destined for neutral countries do not get into German hands.

'Once Operated Well.'

"We might as well lay our cards on the table and tell the British what we are shipping," said Brun. "The United States protested against the system when it was instituted during the World war, basing the contentions on the freedom of the seas. But the system worked out pretty well when it was put in operation."

Other exporters took the view that exporters were primarily concerned in facilitating shipments and avoiding the holding up of ships in the war zone. They were disinclined to discuss the political aspects of the matter, however.

A. H. Tandy, a British consul in New York, characterized the "navicert system" as "a real attempt to help neutrals."

Under the plan, he said, exporters can certify that their goods are not going to Germany. When exporters stipulate just what they are shipping, and where, the British consulate will make an investigation and if the intended consignment is regarded as unobjectionable, the British embassy in Washington will grant a navicert.

Coiffure-Chapeau

Something "new under the hat" is designed by Max Factor, Hollywood makeup man, in this "hairhat" worn by Elaine Shepard. The "hat" is made of human hair in a contrasting shade to the wearer's own hair. For evening wear, the coiffure is hairpinned on and does not conceal the design of milady's real hair.

BEAVERS BUILD DAM FOR U. S.

State Puts 20 to Work on North Carolina Project.

ROCKINGHAM, N. C.—(AP)—It's not exactly a federal project, but 20 beavers are building a dam at a site surveyed by the federal engineers near here.

Last year the soil conservation service surveyed several dam sites for creating small lakes in this area. The dams were never built, but the state conservation department has put a score of beavers on the land. They lost no time in getting to work.

THEATERS

VIRGINIA WEIDLER, juvenile actress, who had neither curls nor dimples to further her career, is forging steadily ahead as an actress. Her next role will be as Mickey Rooney's kid sister in "Young Mr. Edison." . . . Mansfield man who saw Barbara Stanwisk in a night club in New York City the other night (she and Robert Taylor there on vacation) does not agree that she is one of the off-screen beauties. . . . "New Moon" is the sixth picture to co-star Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald. . . . Robert Benchley's next picture will be "The Day of Rest" in which he wears himself out telling you how to relax. . . .

Proud of "Find."

Warner Brothers believe that they have a find in Brenda Marshall and are pushing the young actress to the limit. They are particularly eager to have her click with movie goers since they took her right from under the noses of Paramount, 20th Century and M-G-M, all of whom had seen her in a Federal Theater play and had given her a screen test. She makes her screen bow as a leading player in "Espionage Agent," with Joel McCrea and Jeffery Lynn, now at the Ohio.

100 Thrills.

The Spook House at Coney Island provides a perfect setting for the climax of "Beware Spooks," the Joe E. Brown comedy at the Madison. There are 100 rooms and thrills in every room when Joe chases the bandits right into the house. The climax follows Joe's attempts to make good as a cop. Mary Carlisle is the girl Joe marries and takes to Coney Island for a honeymoon. "Full Confession" with Victor McLaglen and Sally Eilers, is a dramatic theme revolving around a man's conscience.

Polly Pepper's Trials.

Edith Fellows, popular young actress, has one of her most important roles as Polly Pepper, the oldest of the "Five Little Peppers" and her valiant efforts to bring her four younger brothers and sisters through the measles and other more serious trials provides comedy and plenty of human interest. The film version of the famous story is at the Park. Supplementing this feature is "History Is Made At Night" with Charles Boyer and Jean Arthur.

Murder In Reno.

Charlie Chan, Oriental detective, is called to Reno when the wife of his Honolulu friend is involved in a murder. "Involved" seems inadequate in view of the circumstances: the woman who was slated to marry her husband after their divorce is found stabbed to death with the wife standing over the body. Everyone is convinced of her guilt but Charlie Chan. Richard Cortez, Phyllis Brooks, Pauline Moore and Kay Linaker have the major roles. The second feature at the Ritz is "Naughty But Nice."

Today's News Stories.

When "Torpedoed" was shown in New York City recently, reviewers acclaimed it for the thrilling and authentic battle scenes. The theme is lifted from today's newspapers and as the title indicates, the action revolves around the sinking of a passenger ship. H. B. Warner and Noah Beery are seen as leading players. There is a love story accompaniment to the action on the water. George O'Brien is a Robin Hood of the Rio Grande in "The Fighting Gringo." The two films make up the Majestic bill for today, Friday and Saturday.

To conform with the color scheme of one streamlined train, the engineer and his assistant are dressed in white instead of in the usual blue overalls.
